Anti-Iranian outrage grows

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — To the jeers of outraged bystanders and taunts of "Get the hell out of America," about 1,000 Iranians marched under heavy police guard near the White House today to demand that the deposed shah of Iran be returned to their homeland.

The Iranians' march through downtown Washington came during the U.S. capital's lunch hour and was observed by thousands of Americans. Many vented their anger with obscenities and threats.

There was much fist-waving and shouts of "Go home, go home" and "Aren't you ashamed of yourselves, you pigs?"

Two counter-demonstrators were arrested for breaking police lines.

Marchers stretched two blocks and a cordon of riot-equipped police separated them from the crowds on the sidewalks. All along the route, demonstrators saw thumbs-down gestures of disapproval.

At one corner an American grabbed an Iranian's sign and set it afire, yelling: "Go home. You smell like camel."

There were also shouts of "Ayatollah's army — a bunch of bums," "Sand jockeys!" and "Only in America could you get away with this."

In a statement today, the Moslem students holding some 60 American citizens hostage since Sunday in the U.S. embassy in Tehran referred to demonstrations against the Vietnam war in calling on Americans to force their government to extradite the shah.

However, the mood throughout the U.S. was rapidly turning to anger. U.S. longshoremen refused to load ships bound for Iran, American airport workers said they would not service Iranian planes, and other Americans scuffled with Iranian students in several cities Thursday.

An Iran Air 747 airliner with 160 persons aboard was diverted to Montreal's Mirabel Airport on Thursday after baggage handlers in New York said they would refuse to unload the plane. The passengers spent the night at an airport hotel.

Anti-foreign feelings also surfaced in Winnipeg Thursday when an Arab spokesman's claim the Palestine Liberation Organization identifies with "humanitarian causes," was jeered at by University of Winnipeg students.

"Do you consider it humanitarian for the PLO to toss bombs in crowded airports and onto packed buses full of innocent people?", one of 300 students asked Abdullah Abdullah, who works at the Arab League Information Centre in Ottawa.

Following demonstrations in a number of U.S. cities, the White House appealed to Americans not to vent their anger toward Iranian students such as to increase the risks faced by the Tehran hostages.

Top officials from the White House, the Justice Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service have been meeting for the past two days to consider ways, including deportation, to deal with any Iranians in the U.S. who may be found undesirable.

Woman shot, stabbed

A 23-year-old man has been charged with attempted murder after a 19-year-old woman was shot twice and stabbed several times outside an apartment at 1635 Cook Thursday night.

The woman, whose name has not been released, is in fair condition in the intensive care unit at Victoria General Hospital.

The man's identity is withheld until he appears in provincial court.

Police said the woman was shot in the mouth and back and received numerous stab wounds to her throat, head and back in the attack which took place at about 10:40 p.m.

A passer-by saw the woman lying on the sidewalk in a pool of blood and called police.

About an hour later officers arrested the suspect in a suite in the apartment building. Two weapons were subsequently recovered.

Sobering idea

Police throughout B.C. will be out in full force over the Remembrance Day weekend in a bid to nab drinking drivers.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom says more than 25,000 vehicles are expected to be checked between 6 p.m. tonight and Tuesday morning.

Free hostages: UN call

Times News Services

UNITED NATIONS — The United Nations Security Council called today for the release without delay of about 100 hostages held by Iranian students at the U.S. embassy in Tehran since Sunday.

Sergio Palacios de Vizzio of Bolivia, the Council president, issued the appeal "in the strongest terms" after a closed-door meeting of Council members which lasted more than two hours.

The meeting was requested by the United States delegate, Donald McHenry, on instructions from the White House.

Palacios said there was no disagreement on principle, but he did not respond when asked by reported whether the members unanimously agreed on the text of his statement.

In his statement, Palacios also urged UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to "continue to use his good offices to assist toward this objective."

All week, Waldheim has been trying, through personal diplomacy, to obtain the release of the embassy staff, enlisting help from a number of delegations of Islamic countries and the Palestine Liberation Organization. The hostages include some 60 American diplomatic personnel.

A UN spokesman said Waldheim is ready to go to Tehran and was assured he would be received by the Iranian authorities if he made the trip.

The hostages include 60 U.S. citizens and an estimated 30 to 40 other persons — mostly Asians. And a steady stream of Americans are reported leaving Iran in the wake of the crisis.

There have been unconfirmed reports that Waldheim might be asked to fly to Tehran to seek the release of the hostages.

A spokesman for Waldheim said he could not imagine that Iranian authorities would deny Waldheim entry to Iran or that the country's revolutionary leader, the Ayatollah Khomeini, would refuse to meet him.

Three years ago, Waldheim flew to Algiers and obtained freedom for three Frenchmen who had been held by the Polisario guerrilla movement in Western Sahara. He was instrumental in freeing other French captives, in Guinea.

The secretary-general has also used personal emissaries for some humanitarian missions, including Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, an Iranian national.

Possible signs of a break in the standoff over the embassy hostage-taking here came today with news that a

Who's who on ticket at the polls

Victoria voters will have a wide choice when they go to the polls Nov. 17 in the civic election.

There are four mayoralty candidates and 16 aldermanic hopefuls.

On Page 6, reporter Norman Gidney outlines who's who and tells how there's a real possibility the new council could be left of centre with priorities that will concentrate on social issues like housing and jobs.

On page 32 reporter Humphry Davy examines the election in Sidney where construction of a new breakwater is a major issue.

Kamloops owes $$$$ in parking meter gaffe

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Red-faced city officials are refusing to talk about the possibility that they owe thousands of dollars to people scattered around the country, perhaps the world.

A slipup at city hall has left the city indebted to all persons who used parking meters or paid meter fines between the early 1950s and July 25 of this year.

All meter money shovelled into the Kamloops coffers during those 25-plus years was collected illegally because city council forgot to pass a resolution authorizing metered parking zones.

The gaffe was discovered by Kamloops lawyer Wally Wozniak, a man whose blood pressure jumps whenever the word meter is uttered.

Wozniak got so fed up with receiving parking tickets that he challenged two of them in county court. He argued that a parking bylaw had to be supported by a council resolution outlining meter zones. He showed that the resolution requirement had been ignored and last week won his case.

Council closed the loophole effective July 25. But this week a justice of the peace, hearing of Wozniak's victory, cancelled all meter tickets issued before that date.

Wozniak said in an interview Thursday night that the city is morally obligated to return all the nickels, dimes and fines collected over the years.

Kamloops, with a population of roughly 60,000, is strategically located at a junction of the two main highways entering British Columbia from Alberta and is a popular outdoor recreation area. The number of tickets issued since the early '50s might number in the tens of thousands; the amount of meter money collected might be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

But Wozniak said getting the money back might be difficult.

"I think it becomes a question of proof. The nickels and dimes . . . obviously you can't prove them."

But, he said, anyone with proof in the form of a cancelled cheque or receipt from the city for a pre-July 25 meter fine should be able to get the money back.

Crown names CP, CN in freight rate rip-off

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal justice department has charged 20 companies operating in Alberta, including Canadian Pacific and Crown-owned Canadian National Railways, with conspiracy to lesson competition by fixing freight tariff rates.

The companies and 11 individuals, charged with conspiring and agreeing to lessen competition unduly in shipping general merchandise in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba from Dec. 1, 1960 to Nov. 4, 1979, are to appear in Edmonton provincial court Jan. 9.

George Orr, service branch director for the bureau of competition policy with the consumer and corporate affairs department, would not say how much money was involved in the shipping practices under scrutiny in the last 19 years.

"I can't discuss the specifics, but the matter has been investigated for more than a year. It's a matter of considerable size."

William Sokil, president of the Alberta Trucking Association, said the companies have, in effect, been charged with having an informal tariff board which sets fee schedules for shipping. Although Alberta doesn't have a formal board, other provinces do.

C. D. Radke, chairman of the Alberta Motor Transport Board, said there is no regulation on shipping rates in Alberta. In some Eastern provinces, rates have to be approved by the provincial governments.

The companies charged are: Alltrans Express Ltd., Atomic Interprovincial Transportation Systems Ltd., Atomic Transfer Ltd., B-Line Express Ltd., Canadian Freightways Ltd., Canadian National Railway Co., Canadian National Transportation Ltd., Canadian Pacific Transport Co. Ltd., Inter-City Truck Lines (Canada) Inc., Kingsway Freightlines Ltd., Kingsway Freightlines (Saskatchewan) Ltd., Midland Superior Express Ltd., Millar and Brown Ltd., Millar and Brown Freight Lines (Alberta) Ltd., Porter Trucking Ltd., Reimer Express Lines Ltd., Reimer Express (Pacific) Ltd., Reimer Express (Western) Ltd., Soo Security Motorways Ltd., and Western Transportation Association.

The charges carry a maximum penalty of five years in prison or $1-million fines or both. Orr said 19 co-conspirators are also named.

Psyllakis not involved in charges

A story in the Victoria Times Oct. 20 about fraud and theft charges laid in connection with the Donut King franchise operation listed Demetrio Psyllakis as a director of the company at the time of incorporation.

The Times has learned that this statement may have led some readers into believing that Psyllakis was involved in the criminal charges whereas he had, in fact, resigned as a director and sold his shares in the company in mid-1978 and had not been involved in the business dealings of this or any related companies.

Tel doubles charges for boaters' phones

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co. is more than doubling charges to marine radio-telephone users effective Dec. 1, Dale Carter, product marketing manager, said Thursday.

Monthly charges are being increased to $15 from $6.90 and a connection charge of $21 is being implemented. Previously, people who took their boats out of the water during the winter months were not charged for reconnections each year.

"These are cost-substantiated rates filed with the CRTC," Carter said. "We've been dealing with the CRTC (Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission) since the spring on this and they've agreed the service should pay for itself."

Boat owners using radio-telephones now will pay $180 annually, up from $82.80. For owners who use the service four months a year, the cost will nearly triple to $81 from the current $27.60.

Rates for calls will be increased to 80 cents a minute from 70 cents before 5 p.m. Calls made between 5 p.m. and 8 a.m. and on Saturdays and Sundays will now cost 55 cents a minute instead of 45 cents.

Clark ready to impose oil increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark said today he will be ready to use federal powers to impose a plan for higher oil prices if agreement with the provinces is not reached by the end of next week.

Clark said at his weekly news conference that there is broad consensus on the range of price increases but there is provincial disagreement with a federal plan to impose higher taxes on oil companies, particularly those which are foreign owned.

Clark said he hopes that agreement on a new energy package, including price and conservation measures, will be reached at a one-day meeting with provincial premiers Monday.

He did not want to appear to be threatening premiers with the use of federal powers but was prepared to act if necessary.

"I believe it would be valid for us to come to an agreement by the end of next week," he said.

Clark said intensive discusssions with the provinces on a new energy package had led to a consensus on the range of price increases.

But there was sharp disagreement with the federal government over how much more money should go to the oil companies.

Clark said the federal government believes there should be stiffer taxes on oil company income.

Clark's remarks came a day after federal energy department officials released detailed background papers which indicated that the oil industry has more than enough money under current pricing policies to carry out an aggressive program of oil and gas exploration and development. This would move the country towards energy self-sufficiency by 1990. (See story on page 31)

Clark did not indicate the range of price increases on which there appeared to be consensus. But Clark and a number of his key ministers have said repeatedly that prices will have to rise faster than permitted under existing policy.

Current policy calls for a $1-a-barrel increase in oil prices every six months, or $2 a year. That translates into an increase of about six to 10 cents more on a gallon of gasoline and heating oil.

Bread up 2½¢

Three major bakeries have announced wholesale price increases of up to three cents on 16-ounce loaves of bread.

McGavin Foods Ltd. already has increased the price of a 16-ounce loaf of bread by 2½ cents.

Weston Bakeries Ltd., which manufactures Sunbeam bread, said Thursday it will follow suit by raising its wholesale price by two cents effective Monday.

Venice Bakery, based in North Vancouver, said Thursday it plans to increase its price by three cents.

Socred caucus backs down

Social Credit party researcher Ellen Mackay — implicated in the dirty tricks scandal — has won a showdown with the party's 31-member caucus.

But colleague Jack Kelly, who resigned for his part in the affair, is still out of a job.

The caucus had ordered researcher Mackay, 26, to accept a 30-day suspension without pay for her part in the scandal which consisted of advising a party members at a constituency meeting on how to go about using phoney names to plant letters to the editor in newspapers.

A tape of the meeting was made and 170 copies distributed to other constituency organizations.

But MacKay refused to accept the reprimand, saying everything she did was authorized by her superiors.

The standoff lasted four days — and on Thursday the caucus backed down.

Caucus chairman Jack Kempf issued a printed statement which said: "I am confident that Miss Mackay will continue to perform her duties as a caucus researcher to the benefit of the caucus members and I see no need for any further consideration of the matter."

"The case is closed as far as I'm concerned," he said.

Kempf said that the caucus will not reconsider the resignation of Jack Kelly, another party researcher who delivered the same advice on bogus letter-writing at the same constituency meeting as Ms. MacKay.

The caucus chairman said he had Kelly's resignation in hand and would not consider reinstating him even though Ms. MacKay is back at work.

Kelly said today he is consulting his lawyer to decide his next step.

Meanwhile the police investigation into the dirty tricks affair is moving — albeit slowly — ahead.

RCMP Inspector Les Holmes, who is co-ordinating the probe, said Thursday he expects it will be four to five weeks before any decision is made on whether charges will be laid.

The investigation was ordered by Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

Holmes said he has a team of four officers working on the case at the district headquarters in Vancouver.

In addition, about a dozen officers have been collecting evidence in various parts of the province where phoney letters have been published.

So far, he said, officers have received 28 complaints of fake letters — 20 from the Nelson area, two each from Victoria, Vancouver and Lillooet, and one each from Duncan and Nanaimo.

RCMP have also taken possession of a Socred party tape in which Mackay and Kelly advocated the use of fake signatures on letters to the editor.

Banks first, workers next

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill introduced in the Senate Thursday gives banks and other money lenders first crack at bankrupt firms' assets ahead of wage earners.

It is virtually identical to proposals of the previous Liberal government.

The legislation gives workers, seeking unpaid wages preferred status ahead of unsecured creditors.

But secured creditors, such as banks, money lenders and other financial institutions holding collateral on loans and mortgages, are at the head of the line when a company goes broke and assets are divided.

It allows wage earners to claim up to $2,000 in unpaid wages and $500 to cover pension and other health and welfare contributions if that much is left after secured creditors are looked after.

A bill introduced by Warren Allmand, then consumer and corporate affairs minister, last February had proposed to give workers priority over secured creditors.

The government changed the legislation when faced with strong opposition from senators, banks and other financial institutions.

During Senate committee discussion of that bill, banks and moneylenders said if the workers got first crack at assets over secured creditors, loan costs would go up and the size of loans would go down.

Jacques Brazeau, superintendent of the department's bankruptcy branch, said in an interview Thursday the new bill tries to take account of most of the more than 100 recommendations made by the Senate committee.

Bankruptcy is a growing problem in Canada. More than 4,000 businesses have folded this year and their liabilities exceed $436.9 million. In 1970 liabilities due to bankruptcy were $257.6 million.

In addition more than 13,000 individuals have declared personal bankruptcy.

To neighbors it's an unsightly mess, but to Shek Auyoung, it's a future patio

One person's junkyard . . . is another's castle

VANCOUVER (CP) — This is a story about the triumph of individuality, the due process of law and every man's inalienable right to keep a broken-down bedspring in his back yard if he wants to.

Shek Auyoung, a 31-year-old graphic designer, has an unsettling effect on some of his neighbors in the city's Marpole district. This is not surprising.

Most of them drive Buicks and the like. Auyoung tools around in a 1948 army surplus Jeep. Most of their homes are surrounded by yards of trim shrubbery and carefully-manicured lawns.

Auyoung's front yard sports a 1952 Land Rover parked on the lawn, an old wooden washtub converted into a goldfish pond, two old barrels doubling as planters, and an assortment of concrete blocks.

His back yard bulges with old bricks, old barrels, enough salvaged wood to start a lumberyard, steel pots, concrete slabs, a home-made barbecue constructed from a wire refrigerator shelf, and a bedspring used as a trellis for his tomato plants.

He also owns two dogs, a male American pit bull terrier named Toro and a female Rottweiler named Ursa, both of which could play fullback for Pitsburgh Steelers.

About three years ago some of his neighbors started complaining to city inspectors about what they believed was an unsightly mess on Auyoung's property — namely, his back yard.

But one man's mess is another man's material. Auyoung, who hates throwing things away, saves anything he can recycle.

The mess his neighbors had objected to — the concrete, bricks, barrels — was just his future patio lying dormant.

City inspectors came around and asked him to clean up his yard. Auyoung didn't. In the beginning of October, he received a summons to appear in provincial court on the charge of "failing to keep his land free from rubbish or debris and from objects or conditions that might create a health, fire, or accident hazard."

"At first, I wasn't going to fight it, but then I thought this is a democratic country," Auyoung said. "So I fought it."

He went to court this week and argued his own case. During his presentation, he submitted a design showing what he intends to do with his scrap materials. It was a beautiful presentation, demonstrating how every slab of concrete would contribute in the making of his back yard Eden.

"A picture is worth a thousand words," Auyoung said.

"A man's home is his castle," said the judge, who ruled that his mess be left alone.

"The judge was very fair" Auyoung said later. "He said that beauty was in the eye of the beholder and something unsightly to someone might not be unsightly to someone else."

When it was over, a neighbor telephoned Auyoung to congratulate him on winning the case.

Brownout fears cast a pall

B.C. Hydro's forecast of possible electrical brownouts on Vancouver Island by 1983 should not be taken lightly, politicians and forest industry officials said Thursday.

Hydro projections show that electrical demand on the island in the winter of 1982-83 will peak at 1,475 megawatts, but only 1,460 megawatts can be made available.

Hydro has proposed a 500,000-kilowatt power line be built from the Cheekye station near Squamish, across the Sechelt Peninsula and the Gulf Islands to Vancouver Island. Mainland residents are opposed to the project for environmental reasons.

"I am most concerned (by the delay)," said Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney.

"It doesn't matter where you put the crossing, there'll always be someone objecting. But unless we have electricity we'll be dead on this Island."

B.C. Forest Products and Crown Zellerbach, both of which are involved in expanding facilities, say the additional power is essential.

"We only decided to go ahead with the $171 million expansion for another newsprint machine after assurances from Hydro that the cable was going ahead as scheduled," said a Crown Zellerbach spokesman in Campbell River.

Lorne Anderson, Campbell River administrator, said the community's growth depends largely on that expansion.

B.C. Forest Products is adding a $150-million newsprint machine at Crofton, near Nanaimo, which is due to be ready by mid-1982. It will add 90 permanent jobs and up to 400 during construction.

Port Alberni Mayor Jim Robertson said a brief has been sent to B.C. Hydro by the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities requesting a meeting with the Sunshine Coast Regional District board which is investgating the proposed power line.

"We are receptive to that kind of approach," said board chairman Ed Nicholson. "It indicates no snap decisions."

Gas pact for Hydro

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tentative agreement was reached early today between British Columbia Hydro and its gas workers, members of Local 213 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Hydro spokesman John Sexton said negotiators for both sides are recommending acceptance of the settlement and gas workers will begin returning to work on Tuesday.

He said this leaves only one of Hydro's major unions — the Office and Technical Employees Union — without a tentative agreement and Hydro has requested through the mediator that a meeting with the OTEU be scheduled.

Retaliation not helpful

The anti-Iranian backlash growing in the United States is understandable.

Hundreds of demonstrators in Houston, Texas and other centers have taken to the streets, demanding that the United States government deport some 60,000 Iranian students in the country.

The emotional eruption was precipitated by the anti-American demonstrations staged by some Iranian students living in the United States. These students were demanding that the United States hand the former Shah of Iran to Iranian authorities for trial. The Iranian students have also come under fire from a handful of Congressmen, one of whom stated: "These hoodlums were not admitted to U.S. institutions of higher learning so they could throw rocks at our police."

Meanwhile, the fate of the 60 Americans at the United States consulate compound in Tehran remains uncertain. Held captive by a group of teenage terrorists who are backed by one of the most questionable rulers in the world today, they have been condemned to die unless the United States delivers the former Shah into Iranian hands.

Disgust and outrage are the feelings that most people have for Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the group of bandits engaged in this exhibition of international blackmail.

In saying no to the demands of the Iranian captors, the United States has made the only reasonable response to international terrorism. To do otherwise would be to jeopardize other American diplomats who may have the misfortune of being stationed in some other lawless country.

But while Khomeini leads his nation back into the dark ages, the U.S. government should not be tempted to take revenge by deporting 60,000 Iranian students for the actions of a misguided few within their midst. If some are breaking the law, then arrests should be made and charges laid. A forced exodus of Iranians would only play into the hands of Khomeini and would do nothing to relieve the plight of the American hostages.

The Houston demonstrators were chanting one slogan that made sense. "Take your oil and shove it." If those protestors and others in the United States could see their way to give up the 400,000 barrels they import from Iran every day, the country could break its economic dependence on that unscrupulous regime.

All rational persons hope that President Carter, with the aid of other countries can, bring this drama to a peaceful solution.

But regardless of the outcome, the United States and other countries which import Iranian oil should make every effort to use their purchasing power to prevent a recurrence of such a tragedy.

Sign of change?

Federal Indian Affairs Minister Jake Epp, in his first formal visit to B.C. since gaining the portfolio, says he will attempt to get the provincial government to begin land-claims negotiations with native Indians.

His words are an echo of the commitments of former Liberal cabinet ministers. Yet, as with the ambitions of those who have gone before, they are doomed to frustration unless the provincial government changes its attitude significantly.

Ottawa, in the past three or four years, has has turned 180 degrees and said that it is prepared to negotiate a land claims settlement with native Indians. And Victoria, in more muffled tones has said to Ottawa and the Indians, go ahead and negotiate, but without provincial involvement. Naturally no land claims settlement is possible without Victoria.

There remains a strong philosphical difference between the two levels of government. Ottawa, which constitutionally is responsible for the welfare of natives, concedes Indians have some justifiable claim to aboriginal rights and some right to compensation for past wrongs. But Victoria has maintained that aboriginal rights have no basis in law and refuses to recognize them.

The province is pragmatic in its hesitancy to become seriously involved in tri-party negotiations. Native Indians and Ottawa have everything to gain, but the province, which owns most of the land to which Indians are laying claim, believes it has much to lose.

Epp says an agreement between the Victoria, Ottawa and Indians leaders is close on the issue of Indian cut-off lands. The agreement will involve compensation to 22 Indian bands for some 33,000 acres removed from their reserves 60 years ago.

A settlement of cut-off lands would indeed be welcome. Perhaps it is a sign that the provincial government is finally ready to negotiate with native Indians.

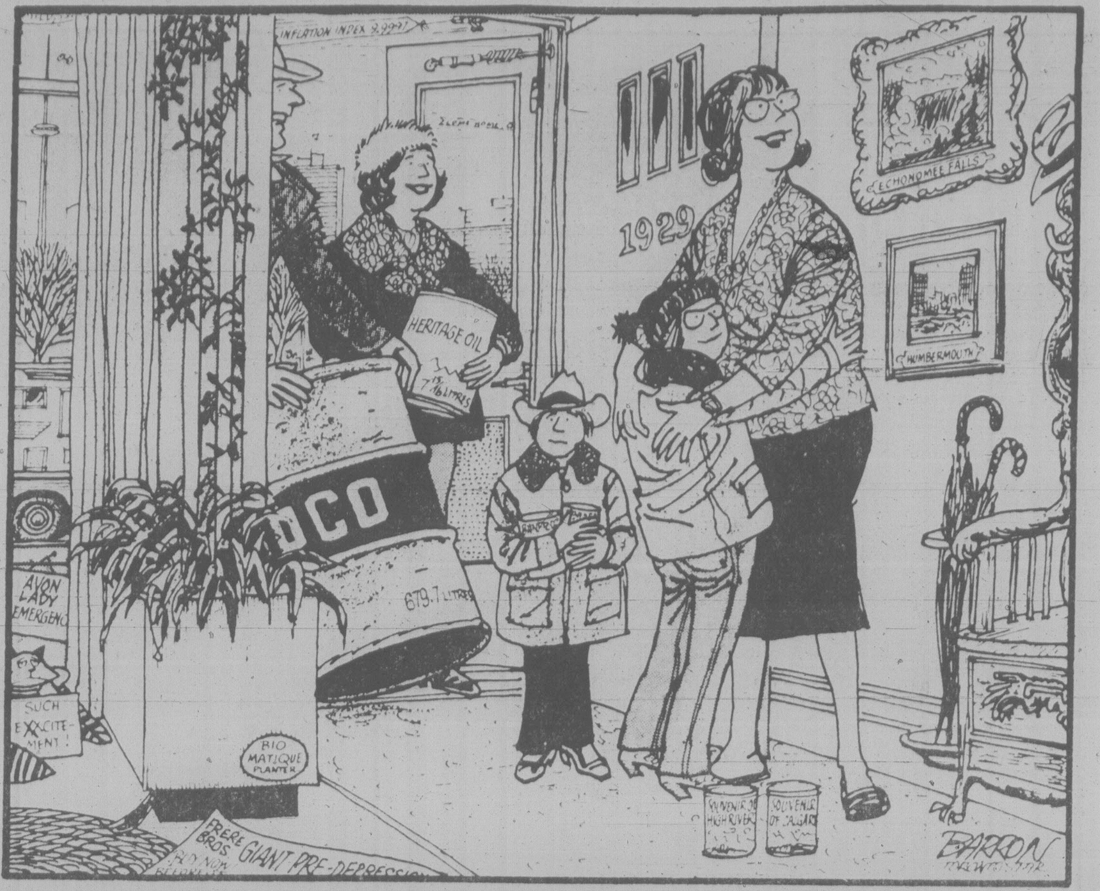
Voicing frustration

One irritation of modern living is the tape-recorded message on the other end of the telephone line. No amount of persuasion will convince the voice that indeed, the number you have dialled is in service and something must be wrong with the switching equipment.

The voice on the other end of the line has of course been recorded, spliced and the tape recorder magically hooked into a computer. However, it appears that a West Germany telecommunications research firm is about to take this system one step further.

A computer who calls himself 'Samt' is being programmed to come onto the line and answer routine questions on dialing codes and long distance rates. Samt's voice has been created from 45 basic German sounds and 1,200 sound bridges. All that is left to do is improve the quality of Samt's monotone.

In the future, it may be no less frustrating trying to get a straight answer from a computer. But at least when the yelling starts, your anger can be directed at the guy who is really in charge.



". . . Harold, it's Cousin Ralph and Martha and the kids from Calgary, and they've brought us some oil . . ."

Govern — despite minority

OTTAWA — After he finished his speech attacking the government for the high interst rates and for the soon-to-be-higher oil prices, Liberal financial critic Herb Gray accepted a question from a Conservative backbencher.

"Can you suggest a single alternative policy?" the government MP asked.

"Yes," replied Gray. "We need an industrial strategy."

Conservative MPs hooted. Two seats from Gray, Liberal MP Jean-Luc Pepin sat, arms folded, trying not to smile. Nine years ago, as Trade and Commerce Minister, Pepin first had uttered the buzzword phrase and had promised a plan to make our industries hum. Ever since, successive ministers, and now successive governments, have hunted for the magical, mythical, remedy for our industrial ills.

Sound and fury

Tuesday night's, 140-138, Commons' vote to sustain the government was like that: sound and fury signifying political theatrics. Urns of coffee and stacks of styrofoam cups set up for the occasion in the government and opposition lobbies. Packed public galleries. Hot corridor rumors, such as that the Creditistes would tie the vote to embarrass Speaker Jim Jerome, whom they think has been unfair to them, by forcing him to cast the deciding vote.

None of this, of course, had anything to do with interest rates or with oil prices. It had everything to do with Pierre Trudeau's tenure as Liberal leader. It had everything to do as well with the Liberals' need to show that they are not afraid to force an election, even though they are afraid to force an election until Trudeau's tenure is decided. If you follow.

After pseudo-drama will come, soon, melodrama. The next "no-confidence" time around — early in December, when the budget will be voted — the absence of just one Conservative, because sick or snowbound, or because Alberta MP Paul Yewchuck decides again, as he did on Tuesday, to open a school in Lac La Biche rather than to vote in the Commons, probably will leave the count tied. Speaker Jerome then would have to decide whether to vote with the government, as speakers traditionally do, or to vote, as a Liberal, with the Opposition. Either choice would make Jerome less the impartial speaker than he is now.

The combined Conservative-Creditiste margin probably soon will be cut to one from three today, because, by all the signs and portents, the Conservatives will lose the pair of byelections due on Nov. 19.

In Prince Albert, Sask., where Dief once was the Chief, the New Democrats look to be in the lead. In Newfoundland's Burin-St. George, where former minister Don Jamieson was the duke, the Liberals should hold on, fending off the NDP as much as the Conservatives.

These results, if they happen, will change the mood of the government and of the opposition. They need not, though, change anything within Parliament.

Once the exception, minority parliaments have become today's rule. In six of the nine parliaments since 1957, governments have had to government with a minority. Only twice during these six minority parliaments was the government of the day forced into an election by a defeat in the Commons — in 1963 and in 1974, when, in fact, Trudeau engineered his own loss to bring on an election he knew he would win.

A couple of MPs at least are looking for new roles to play. "I'm not going to vote for any more of these ritualistic non-confidence motions," veteran New Democrat MP Arnold Peters remarked to me when I encountered him in the lobby. "I'll vote for, or against, actual legislation, and the budget, but not for these political word games."

To explain the role he aspires to, Conservative MP Ged Baldwin handed over a copy of a speech that he had, by coincidence, made that evening to the Canadian Public Relations Society.

Party growth

"Parliament", said Baldwin in his speech, "is suffering from a disease which could well become terminal . . . the extraordinary growth of the modern party system and the discipline which goes with it, and the resulting loss of independence of the private member."

Baldwin proposed that the government declare that, except in the instance of non-confidence votes, defeat in the Commons would not compel an election. Thereafter, said Baldwin, "there will be times when my vote will not necessarily be the same as the majority of my party."

In 1654, Oliver Cromwell told the Rump Parliament, "In the name of God, go". This parliament needs to be told, as Baldwin and Peters are trying to, "For God's sake, govern". Certainly, in Cromwell's time, parliament's disease really was terminal.

Unfair experiment

It was unbelievable. The Victoria Symphony Orchestra had finished their tuning ablutions; the conductor had "warmed them up" with the national anthem; the program was about to begin when a strident noise came from the balcony. At first it sounded as though a pet crow was loose and calling, "the plane, the plane", but the acoustics finally cleared and it was a woman shouting, "the queen, the queen". Suddenly, an evening at the symphony had become a forum for a raucous political statement.

The screaming, foot stamping, brattish actions of a portion of the audience was a hideous and frightening embarrassment. The infuriating and degrading part of the incident was not whether or not the monarchists were to sing "God Save the Queen", to symphonic accompaniment, but rather that an unsuspecting and paying audience was being used as a pawn in a backroom power play.

If the Symphony Association hopes to gain and maintain credibility, it must address itself to the pleasure and comfort of all its patrons. To encourage the disruption of a performance with an amateur experiment is ill-advised and unfair. — Lavonne Huneck, 3210 Shelley Street.

Revive old values

It was one of the philosopher-writers of the corrupt and decadent Roman Empire who said: "Drink and be merry, tomorrow we shall die."

And the mighty empire did fall, not so much under the pressure of "barbarian invasions" but because of the many evils from within. Free bread and free games had replaced austerity and hard work. Masses had abandoned the farms and crowded the cities, spending their time at the public baths, at the circuses, or watching chariot races and gladiators in the Coliseum.

To a lesser extent, so far, this is repeated in our present society. The old virtues of thrift and work have been replaced by increasing demands for more recreation facilities, shorter working weeks and days, longer vacation and leaves of absence.

Gone is the time when a person considered himself or herself very lucky to have Saturday afternoon off, plus Sundays and two weeks holidays a year.

Gone is the time when lunch hour was limited to exactly 60 minutes and a 10-minute coffee break was a privilege. It was difficult to save $25 a month on a salary barely reaching the $300 a month. Yet people were not unhappy, even when performing tasks that today are disparagingly called "menial."

There is no such a thing as "menial work." All work has dignity, far higher dignity than living on handouts at the expense of others.

Perhaps a revival of old values is impossible today, but under contemporary ideas some new ways to decrease the amount of time lost on strikes and lock-outs must be found to produce more, to export more, to make better use of our natural resources and to create a better climate of labor-management relations. There must be some goodwill, some understanding some compromises, some agreements that take into account the aspirations and needs of the working people and of those who provide the work.

Too much government intervention at all levels is not the answer, unless national security is at stake.

On the negative side, we are plagued by excessive taxation, by too many conflicts of interest, by lack of enlightened and strong leadership in government, by bureaucracy, and by indifferent, easy-going attitudes.

The role of the individual seems insignificant and futile when confronted by all these problems which defy solutions: indeed, it is discouraging! — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

The Victoria symphony displayed a lack of concern, says patron.

Treat with respect

The police executive and many people have worked hard to obtain a good contract for city police officers.

Of late city police officers are receiving flack from all sides. Charges are made against some which are not substantiated or the officer's badge number identified. Some people want our city streets overrun with street children, some even 11 years old, and want new facilities opened, as if we haven't got enough as it is. No wonder crime is accelerating in our town and these so-called "innocent" kids are immune under the Juvenile Act. Chief Jim Kettles had the right idea back in a prairie city. He installed a curfew and parents were fined $500 for having kids on the street.

Let us not treat our police officers as "second-class citizens." All police officers and cars, as well as the eight motorcycles, should be heavily insured. No officers should be requested to appear in court, after working all night and only having one hour to change, etc.

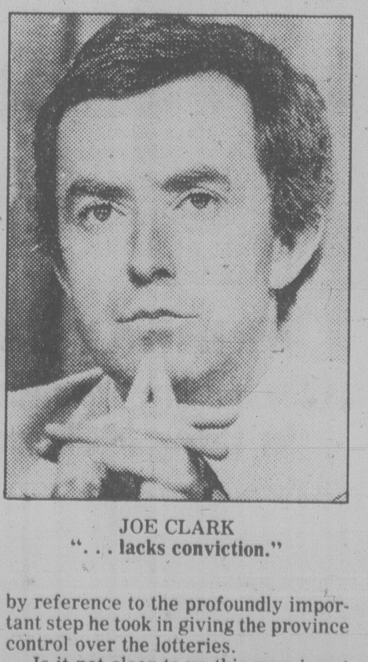
There should be better communication between city council and police board. These men are not robots and should be treated with respect and courtesy, as they are innocent until proven guilty. — Anne V. Sherbrook, 1919 Davie Street.

Dull leadership

Our prime minister is the instrument of our education: we are discovering by a process of negation what political leadership should be.

Mr. Clark has seen fit to commit himself to certain positions: the embassy move, mortgage deductability, "stimulative deficit" tax cutting scheme, opposition to high interest rates, dismemberment of Petro-Can, refusal to allow Quebec to vote itself out of Confederation — these while in opposition and during the election campaign.

What has happened? Well, the reversal on the embassy move was a fait accompli, (although it is rumored his recent decision was a punitive one — MP Donald Munroe is reported to have said that Clark was angry with Jewish voters for not supporting him); his fiscal proposals he decided were ill-advised; inspite of overwhelming opposition to breaking up Petro-Can he clings to the ideology of conservative egohood — "My God, we can't back down on this one too! I don't care if it's wrong: I have an image to uphold after all" (we can imagine him saying to Tory critics); he avoids taking a firm stand on Mr. Levesque's white paper — abdicating the authority of his position, defending his conciliatory stance by reference to the profoundly important step he took in giving the province control over the lotteries.



JOE CLARK
". . . lacks conviction."

Is it not clear to us this man is not grounded in a conviction about himself, his role, or the destiny of Canada that would reveal itself in a style, a presence, a vision of action upheld by the unfolding of the script of history?

Political leadership — even the whole theatre of politics — should teach us that decisions can be made within a dignity, a courage, an aesthetic grace that accords with the mystery, the awesome triumph and tragedy of human civilization; in this vast, unfathomable drama Joe Clark occupies a center stage role. Is it too much to expect him to deliver himself with nobility and justice?

Mr. Clark on the basis of his performance so far is the stuff of deadly dullness; it is his destiny to awaken us to a perception that does not isolate the 'content' of ideas from the beauty and the maturity of the person. In fact we may some day discover — precipitated by Mr. Clark's artifices — laws of coherence that will reveal politics as subject to ethical and aesthetic possibilities as harmonious and beautiful as the laws of quantum mechanics or the motion of the galaxies. — Robin W. Carlsen, 1225 Sunnyside Avenue.

Hard to do both

For the first time in my memory the mayor of Oak Bay was unable to attend the annual Halloween children's party and bonfire at Fireman's Park. This makes me wonder how wise it was for Brian Smith to have kept his office as mayor after being elected as a Social Credit MLA from Oak Bay/Gordon Head. This particular missed appointment was directly as a result of his attending a caucus meeting of his party in Vancouver to discuss the "dirty tricks" affair. How many other events has he missed due to his being both an MLA and a mauyor?

Brian Smith should have stepped down as mayor soon after he was elected MLA.—T. A. Sellgren, 1587 Hampshire Road.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

Colored for science

Bright yellow and orange are not colors normally used to describe Dunlin or Western Sandpipers. Dull browns and greys, yes; but yellow and orange, never! Well, hardly ever.

The reason for the qualification is that, for the past three years — at least for parts of those years — several thousands of these little shorebirds have been drifting around the west coast of North America sporting varying amounts of the abovementioned colors, all in the interests of science.

Blame, if such be the word, for the sudden appearance of Dunlin and Western Sandpipers in colors other than their ancestral regalia can be laid directly at the feet of biologists of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service who are trying to find out what effect exploration for gas and oil on the west coast of Alaska might have on the lives of the birds that nest there.

So far, the attention of the scientists has been concentrated on Nelson Lagoon, on the Alaska penninsula, and on the delta of the Yukon River on the west-central coast of Alaska. And while the jury is still out on the effects of exploration, the color-marking of Dunlins and Western Sandpipers has revealed some exciting facts about their migrations.

For example, Dunlin marked at Nelson Lagoon — which sport red and blue plastic bands on one of their legs in addition to patches of orange-yellow dye — are birds that concentrate there after nesting in the area. After completing their moult they begin to put on weight, in this case fat, the fuel for the little motors that will drive them on their long journey south.

By early October they're ready. All that is needed then is the passage of a weather system which will produce fair weather and westerly winds.

Now the story the color-marked birds tell begins to get exciting, because all the evidence points to a non-stop, over-water flight of nearly 2,000 kilometres to wintering grounds in California. The trip is believed to require 24 to 40 hours of continuous flight. As a matter of fact, one bird marked at Nelson Lagoon was in San Francisco three days after the event, and only two days after a major storm had passed the lagoon.

Dunlin from a little farther northeast — the delta of the Yukon River — take a different route south. While the evidence to support this is still weak, there are indications that the birds from the Yukon delta — wearing red and green leg bands — hold to a much more land-based migration.

They seem to leave Alaska a little later than their brethren from Nelson Lagoon, and make their way south along the coast to winter from southern British Columbia to Oregon. Another possibility, which at the moment cannot be discounted, is that these birds may not hug the coast all the way but make a shorter sea journey cutting across Prince William Sound. Whatever the route, some of these Dunlin end up in our part of the world in November. Last year six of them were seen here.

Canadian Biologists have their version of the color-marked Dunlin story. Their's involves Dunlin that normally winter in the thousands on the delta of the Fraser River.

In an effort to determine just how important estuaries, such as that of the Fraser River, are to wintering and migrating shorebirds, biologists of the Canadian Wildlife Service have been banding Dunlin with orange and yellow plastic bands. So far, once the autumn migration is over, Dunlin of the Fraser River don't seem to move very far.

But the Fraser delta isn't far from here, and there's always the chance that some of those Alaska birds may find their way here too. So, if your winter birding needs a little spice, take a closer look at the Dunlin you see. The orange and yellow on their feathers will fade with time but the color of the bands won't.

On the other hand, if it's a contribution to science you want to make, let me know what you see and I'll pass the details on to the Canadian Wildlife Service.

Japan's civil servants live it up

By ROBERT WHYMANT
Manchester Guardian

TOKYO — The chalk-faced Geisha are pouring the evening's first round of very finest Scotch for the sombre-suited civil servants. Outside the high-class restaurants in Akasaka, black chauffeur-driven limousines crowd the narrow lanes. As the men from the ministry dig into Hokkaido smoked salmon, the trunks of the waiting cars are discreetly packed with the presents — expensive liquor, confectionery, a gold-plated lighter — that in Japan are mandatory tokens of esteem from party-givers to party-guests.

Not surprisingly, the most warmly courted public servants are those from the finance ministry, most intensively wined and dined at the season when government agencies submit their budget demands.

But now the Epicurean burden on the stewards of the country's taxes is to be lightened, due to a public uproar about the lavish manner in which they are entertained, more often than not at the taxpayers' expense.

The current furore began when government auditors found "phantom" employees on the payroll, and non-existent business trips on the accounts of the Japan Railway Construction Corporation, a government office. In a 17-month period, it was discovered $2 million had thus been generated to provide special bonuses for the staff and entertainment funds to wine and dine finance ministry officials to help win budget allocations.

In quick succession, similar irregularities were uncovered in the environment agency, in the Post Office, and in the Air Force. Tokyo municipal workers were found to be getting overtime pay for hours they did not work, and it was found that the Tokyo tax office had been paying overtime as a regular benefit whether employees did it or not.

Coming on top of the revelation that one top mandarin had collected $3 million in retirement pay after 41 years public service, these irregularities provoked a storm of public criticism. Newspapers began their own investigation and have unearthed examples of fraudulent bookkeeping designed to camouflage exorbitant entertaining.

During a nine-month period in 1978, the newspaper reported, finance ministry officials were lavishly wined and dined by the health and welfare ministry, the Japan Railway Construction Corporation, and other government agencies. The investigation covered only one out of more than a score of similar exclusive watering-places in Akasaka.

But this was not all. Last month, it was announced that two employees of Japan's telecommunications monopoly, International Telegram and Telephone (KDD) had been caught smuggling jewelry into Japan without paying duty.

Customs investigators are believed to have evidence that since May, 1978, KDD employees, acting on company orders, have evaded duties on $250,000 worth of watches, brooches, tie pins, and other expensive accessories, many of which were bought in London.

The luxury goods were intended as gifts for foreign clients, according to the company, which denied it was involved in a systematic smuggling operation. But police sources believe that items smuggled into Japan stayed here, and were tokens of esteem to ruling party politicians and powerful bureaucrats. The money used to purchase the presents apparently came out of the monopoly's entertainment budget, $5 million in 1978.

This is four times the average expense account provision for Japan's leading private corporations, and excessive even by the standards of a country where corporate entertaining (some $8 billion last year) is the equivalent of a small country's gross national product.

The Japan Railway Construction Corporation is to sack its president, and finance ministry officials were banned from carousing with representatives of other government agencies or private industry from the end of last month.

Conditions in the paradise of public funds are not expected to be seriously affected, however, by the current surge of criticism.

Door kept open for nuclear power

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

The report of President Jimmy Carter's commission of inquiry into the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant was anything but a whitewash.

Among contributing causes of the nightmare it found ignorance, incompetence, undermanning, confusion, operating errors, faulty design and blindness to what should have been recognized as warning signals. The company that ran the plant wasn't up to the job. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission didn't know what it was doing. Equipment failed. And improperly trained operators made one error after another.

It all adds up to a dismal picture and a heavy and urgent agenda for radical improvement in the design, construction, operation and supervision of nuclear power plants in the United States.

But by the same token it also adds up to a very solid and persuasive set of credentials for going ahead with the development of nuclear generating capacity, provided it is done with the necessary competence, care and concern for safety. The Three Mile Island operation made a hash of the application of nuclear energy, the commission found. And it was the hash, not the use of nuclear energy in itself, that was at fault.

So the commission's report, while calling for change at almost every stage of the development and operating process, from the drawing board to communication with the public, also recommended that the development of nuclear plants be continued on schedule.

And that should be encouraging to all who are open to reason and to factual evidence on the issue of nuclear power, to those who fear that necessary power development will be halted by opposition based on fear and superstition rather than on hard fact, and to those who have been alarmed to find that reasonable questions about safety and emergency procedures are too often brushed off with glib, unfounded assurances that nothing can possibly go wrong.

Things can go wrong in every kind of power generation. Fossil fuels can explode. Hydro power dams can collapse. Coal mines can cave in. Coal smoke can poison the atmosphere. From none of these sources of energy can we expect a guarantee against failure or error. What we can expect is that everything humanly possible be done to prevent these errors and failures and to ensure that when they do occur they do not lead on to disaster.

Coffee, toast and calipers

Russell Baker

One of the morning papers said that some hard facts were beginning to emerge.

"Have you heard about the facts?" I asked my breakfast companion.

"What about them?" she said.

"They are hard," I said.

"That's ridiculous," she said. "Facts have no molecular structure and can, therefore, be neither hard nor soft. An artifact, on the other hand, is an object, having mass and texture, and is, hence, capable of possessing the quality loosely defined as hardness, or such other qualities as softness, sponginess, sliminess, scratchiness or oiliness, to name but a few. The hardness you ascribe to the facts indicates quite clearly that they are not facts, but artifacts."

"It says right here in the paper," said I, "that some hard facts are beginning to emerge."

"I doubt it," she said.

"Doubt what?"

"That the facts are emergent. When did the revolutions of the planets around the sun emerge?"

"At the creation," I said.

"Exactly," she said. "The planets revolved around the sun for eternities. That is a fact. It was a fact before there was anybody on earth sensible enough to realize it was a fact. The fact did not emerge when somebody pointed a telescope at the sky and deduced the nature of planetary relationships to the sun. The fact was merely discovered. It had been a fact all along and would still be a fact today if nobody had ever discovered it."

"Keeping that in mind, consider your newspaper report that some hard facts are beginning to emerge. I have already disposed of the absurd possibility that these facts can be hard, soft, scratchy, oily, etcetera, and have shown that facts exist independently of their discovery —"

She paused out of respect for the glaze seeping over my eyeballs. "Are you bored?" she asked.

"Give it to me right from the shoulder," I begged. "Are some facts beginning to emerge or is this newspaper giving me false facts?"

"As briefly as possible," she said, "your newspaper is merely stating that some facts, possibly long existent, have now come to its attention. These facts are, of course, not hard. They may, however, be interesting, dull, amusing, important or trivial to you, depending upon your interests. We may conclude that they are interesting and important to the editor of your newspaper since he gives them space he knows to be valuable. It is quite likely that he wishes these facts to seem interesting and important to you, rather than dull and trivial, since he has allowed his writer to prefix the word 'facts' with the idiotic but attention-getting word 'hard'."

"I wish I hadn't brought it up," I said.

"To answer your second question," she continued, "it is impossible for your newspaper to give you false facts."

"How about some more coffee?"

"Your newspaper," she said, "might very well report that the planets do not revolve around the sun but that the sun revolves around the earth. Misinformation of this sort appears frequently in the press, but it is not a false fact, since it is not a fact at all. It is merely an error or, if published with intent to deceive, a lie or, if published with intent to hoodwink, a hoax. A fact cannot be false. Failure to grasp this childish truth led Sen. Joseph McCarthy to expose the muddle of his own mind when he said he had 'facts, which if true,' would reveal Communist conspiracy in government."

"Not Joe McCarthy — not at this hour of the morning," I gasped.

"It took scarcely an iota of brain," she went on, "to see that Mr. McCarthy did not have facts, but only assertions which might be untrue."

"Are you sure you've got your facts straight?" I asked.

"Facts," she said, "approach infinity in number and are not subject to arrangement in linear sequence in either two or three dimensions, except for the purposes of systematic reasoning, which process requires us to ignore the inconvenient random existence of numberless facts apparently irrelevant to our line of thought, despite a large body of evidence that random facts discarded during the attempt to establish a pure line of reasoning often come back to wreck it."

"Is that so?" I asked.

"That's a fact," she said, "and it isn't hard either. It's just a fact."

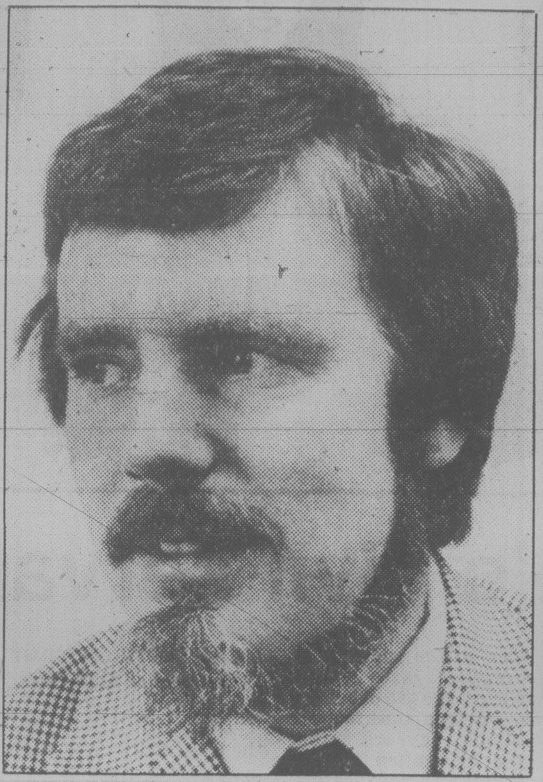
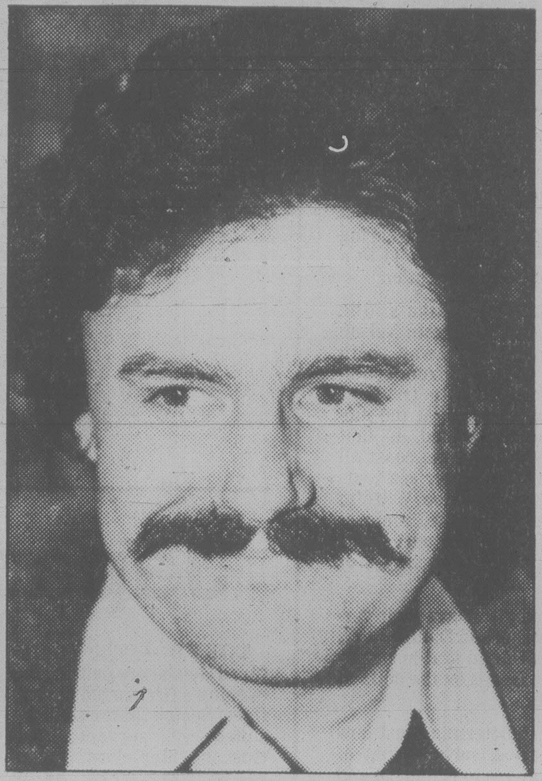
The election . . . VICTORIA

Bill Tindall



John Hayes



David Borgstrom

Murray Glazier

For mayor:

The choice is wide

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria voters go to the polls a week from Saturday to elect a new council, worrying about local unemployment, a budding housing shortage and the old perennial, sewage disposal.

It's the first mayoralty contest in four years, since the 1975 election when retiring Mayor Mike Young beat five unknowns and the first time voters are choosing a full slate of eight aldermen. Young had no opposition in 1977.

Four men are running for the chief magistrate's job and the 39,045 eligible voters have a fairly wide range of ages, philosophies and backgrounds to choose from.

Though a number of issues have been mentioned in the campaign, this election has mostly boiled down to one — leadership.

At 58, Bill Tindall is the elder statesman on council, a veteran of four terms with strong ties to the local establishment and the business community as manager of the Better Business Bureau for nearly two decades.

Former alderman Alf Hood is his campaign chairman, ex-mayor Percy George has endorsed him, and lame duck Mayor Young has made no secret of his personal preference for Tindall.

Murray Glazier is 44, a five-year veteran on council and is chairman of Victoria's finance committee and the Capital Regional District board. He is an engineer who left his firm several years ago to work full time at politics.

The third alderman running is John Hayes, 37, and like Tindall, unemployed at present. He resigned his job as an appraiser with Morguard Properties Ltd. 10 days before he announced his candidacy.

He has managed to achieve some reforms at city hall, such as the three-year ban on 2,4-D, but has been criticized for lack of participation in debate and his inability to marshal support effectively for his ideas.

Outsider David Borgstrom, 32, a temporary probation officer and part-time student is the fourth candidate and is fighting a wave of indifference. He's made out to be an eccentric doing it for a laugh.

For example, Monday Magazine and CBC radio have ignored him. CHEK television asked him if he was running to gather material for a term paper for his psychology courses at the University of Victoria.

But he doesn't make it too easy for voters to take him at face value when he says he's "dead serious" but at the same time he'd sure like to see Hayes in the mayor's chair.

Glazier, who was first elected to council in 1974 and topped the aldermanic poll in 1976, started his mayoralty campaign by announcing Cityplan 80, an elaborate citizens' task force of up to 100 members which would draft plans for Victoria in the 1980s.

But since then Glazier hasn't mentioned the scheme after it was belittled by rivals Hayes and Tindall, and he has made few specific promises since.

Tindall and Glazier have been campaigning largely on their records as experienced, seasoned aldermen, while Hayes has issued a detailed list of campaign promises ranging from 10 more policemen to provide foot patrols and team policing methods to a downtown farmers' market, a yacht race for local sailors and a civic ombudsman.

Tindall is chairman of council's key economic development committee, a member of the Urban Transit Authority board and the Provincial Capital Commission. He has been closely involved in the planning for a new convention centre, and is credited with initiating the shuttle bus and new Freewheeler fareless bus zone downtown.

Glazier's ads have emphasized his "training, experience and dedication" but he is having trouble overcoming an abrasive image. He has alienated many local politicians — Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier and city Ald. Bob Wright among them — with his manoeuvring.

He has support for Cityplan from Borgstrom, who wants to see "shadow councils" in every neighborhood advising the mayor and aldermen on different issues as they affect each district.

And at the neighborhood all-candidates' meetings, the consensus from the audiences has favored greater citizen participation in decision-making at city hall, perhaps directly-elected local representatives on such bodies as the advisory planning commission.

"There are many options open — some will be in direct conflict," said Glazier Sept. 21 when he declared his candidacy.

"We have to decide on our goals by making planning everybody's business — not just the politicians and technicians.

Cityplan will involve "scores of individuals and groups reprsenting young and old, business and labor," Glazier said. It will hold public meetings around the city and find out what the public wants. City staff would furnish the force with information on the economy, population, recreation and land use.

Tindall is a quiet politician with a courtly manner and a reputation for getting things done behind the scenes. He acknowledged his mild-mannered approach to politics when he first announced his candidacy:

"I'm not going to get up on a pedestal and tell all and sundry I'm going to set the world on fire," he said.

He promises that as mayor at least one day every two weeks would be set aside for ordinary people to talk directly to the mayor or his designate about their problems.

Tindall also wants to see a monthly bus pass instituted.

More police may be needed but the city should study the issue first, he has said. Hayes says "enough endless debate" — Victoria should hire another 10 policemen for the community services section.

Sewage became an issue this week when Hayes' proposal for a six-month halt on the Clover Point outfall and a regional referendum on treatment alternatives was attacked by Glazier and Tindall. The CRD chairman said a treatment plant at Clover Point would take up more than twice the available open space and cost $31 million.

Tindall said contracts have been let for the construction of the outfall and the best advice the CRD has from the engineering experts is that it will work.

For alderman:

The 16-candidate aldermanic race is proceeding in a lower key but it has generated more interest and speculation, perhaps because the new council will be so different, with at least four new faces.

"It doesn't really matter who gets to be mayor," says one alderman.

He thinks the election will see at least four and perhaps five — a majority — council members belonging to a loose left-of-centre group that will give a different political complexion to civic affairs.

The "progressives" would by no means vote as a monolithic bloc — disagreements between the present three left-of-centre aldermen have been common — but if incumbents Robin Blencoe and Bill McElroy get some like-minded friends on council, the next two years should see a much greater emphasis on social issues like housing and jobs.

Former federal NDP candidate Gretchen Brewin and union official John Shields, who tried unsuccessfully for the party's nomination in Victoria in the provincial election, are running strong campaigns, with low-cost housing one of their main planks.

Blencoe and McElroy (who placed Shields' name before the Victoria NDP nominating convention in April) seem likely to be re-elected.

Other left-of-centre candidates include Gentry Hudson, a B.C. Hydro bus driver and official of the Amalgamated Transit Union, music promoter Rob Mingay, who is a former research assistant to the provincial NDP caucus, and hospital worker Charles Ball, a long-time neighborhood activist in James Bay who is trying for a council seat for the third time. But they are seen as longshots.

On the other side of the political watershed, there are several council members who make no secret of their conservative, business-oriented, Social Credit affiliations — Ron McKenzie and Bob Wright.

Auto dealer Frank Carson, an alderman for one year in 1977 and an unsuccessful Socred candidate in the 1975 election (like Mayor Mike Young this year), is running for council this time on a platform of belt-tightening and shaving expenditures, while trying to update somewhat dilapidated physical assets — streets, sewers and sidewalks.

Peter Yorke, the school trustee who owns OK Tire in Victoria, has also been a staunch conservative on education issues and a Social Credit supporter.

Patrick Skillings of the well-known Victoria family which includes his father, former Social Credit cabinet minister and alderman Waldo Skillings, is another candidate.

He wants to bring in zero-based budgeting — examining every city program from the ground up every year, instead of just looking at the proposed spending increase.

And the youngest candidate in the race, Dermod Travis, tells everybody he's been labelled a member of "the new right."

He brings warm endorsements from ex-mayor Peter Pollen and former B.C. Tory leader Scott Wallace.

He kicked off his campaign eight weeks ago with a strong attack on the "left-wingers" on council, Blencoe, McElroy and Larry Ryan, the labor council secretary who isn't running this time.

The other candidates — engineer Ken Sinclair, retired civil servant Joe Richards and E&N brakeman John Cooper — are more or less unknown quantities.

Richards ran third from last in a 14-man race in 1977 and is a pesky gadfly who attends every council meeting.

He always has a query at council question periods and the groans from council and staff are often audible.

Sometimes it's hard to follow his reasoning, which derives from sources as varied as Playboy magazine and the Vancouver papers. He's probably best known for his "City Watchdog" column which runs regularly in newspaper classified ads.

People smile at Richards but he has pushed for reforms — like the shuttle bus and police foot patrols — which later become official policy.

Cooper is a candidate who has to overcome a one-issue background. He rose to prominence as chairman of the Save the E&N Committee. Transportation is his forte.

"The city has ignored the crying need for an integrated public transportation centre," says Cooper.

Combining bus, rail and ferry traffic, the new terminal should also be tied in with the new waterfront convention centre.

Yorke says he's interested in "doing something to make downtown more interesting — it's a little dead."

The city needs some excitement. Seattle is a good example to follow. He says its stagnating waterfront has been revived with restaurants and shopping. "You get scads of people coming down if you allow that."

Mingay wants to see Victoria put on a Shakespearean festival and other cultural events in the off-season to make Victoria a full-time tourist centre. The city also ought to establish a central rental registry for people hunting for housing and build a transit system that is a true alternative to the automobile.

Sinclair doesn't have campaign promises — he calls them platform principles. He would work to reduce taxes by increasing municipal efficiency, provide freer access to city records and information for the public and tighten up design controls for new buildings.

Special heritage preservation zoning for the whole city and a neighorhood preservation bank to finance renovations are the principal campaign planks offered by Hudson.

Blanket zoning would mean the whole city would be designated heritage and the onus would be on the developer to argue for exemption, not the other way round as at present. With the preservation bank, homeowners could borrow up to $20,000 at half the going interest rates to repair their homes.

Ald. Wright, chairman of council's other main committee, land-use planning and zoning, bases his campaign on a 10-point platform that includes proceeding with the Chinatown cleanup, expanding the two-year-old civic building design controls to other parts of the city and rehabilitating the downtown area.

He also supports a light industrial park in the area north of Bay and east of the Gorge, and as chairman of the regional district's sewage subcommittee opposes sewage treatment because he claims the Clover Point outfall will work.

Ball wants to see the old ward system, which was abolished in 1912, restored to Victoria council with possibly 10 districts each electing an alderman. Local neighborhoods should also be able to elect directly representatives to boards like the advisory planning commission now composed of appointees named by the mayor.

Blencoe's main issue is a social planning council, an advisory body composed of people from the various social service agencies who would assist council to solve the social problems facing the poor, native Indians, immigrants and the young.

He also wants a citizen recreation commission to involve the public in recreation decisions, and suggests financial incentives for residents who participate in crime prevention and garbage recycling programs.

Another incumbent, McKenzie is urging broad reforms in the regional district system that amount to semi-amalgamation of the Victoria region municipalities.

He wants to institute region-wide revenue sharing between municipalities, cost-sharing of police, fire, sewer, parks and other local services, and a central administration with tougher powers of enforcement.

He would also work to preserve the Victoria General Hospital for emergency treatment and extended care, wants police foot patrols downtown and quick action on a sewage treatment plant.

Brewin is chairman of Prime Time, a federal pilot project for women in their middle years, and has three years' experience as a school trustee in metro Toronto. She promises to be a full-time alderman and to concentrate on services to senior citizens and policies to ensure neighborhood preservation.

Shields considers himself a representative of the workingman in Victoria and has been one of the few candidates to focus on unemployment and what he sees as the need to build more affordable housing. A social worker in the Fernwood area, Shields says he would act as "a problem-solver for people who are having difficulty dealing with city hall."

Before the judge

A 21-year-old man who broke into James Bay elementary school was jailed for four months by Judge Fred Green in provincial court Thursday.

Jerry Wayne Kitchen, 506 Pendray, pleaded guilty to the Oct. 29 offence at 140 Oswego.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Victoria police responded to a silent alarm at 3:15 a.m., surrounded the building and saw Kitchen and a companion running towards a hallway looking for an escape route.

They got outside and Kitchen was chased until he was captured in the 200-block Ontario.

Found inside the school was a pill vial bearing Kitchen's name, Laughton said.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said Kitchen's inability to get employment and alcohol were to blame.

James Edward Flanagan, 23, of 1017 Denman, jointly charged with breaking and entering, pleaded not guilty and his trial was set for March 26.

A 22-year-old woman was given a conditional discharge after pleading guilty to writing nine worthless cheques in two days totalling $458.01.

Ruth Kathleen Vahey, 712 Yates, admitted eight counts of false pretences and one of obtaining lodgings by fraud.

She was arrested when she returned to B.C. from Ontario on Nov. 6 but initially denied being in the province when the cheques were written last year.

Duty legal aid lawyer James Main said Vahey left a violent home life at the age of 13, was a rape victim who became pregnant from the incident when she was 18, and married an alcoholic and violent husband at the age of 19. He said she is the mother of a four-month-old child whom she was going to put up for adoption.

Main said Vahey was working at the Dominion Hotel in 1978 and was in an unbalanced state of mind from acute depression and loneliness when she went on the cheque-writing spree.

A pre-sentence report was ordered for 25-year-old Daniel Charles O'Sullivan of no fixed address.

O'Sullivan pleaded guilty to a break-in last Friday at 114 Beach Drive and 311 Dennison in Oak Bay.

Laughton said O'Sullivan had a two-page criminal record and was on probation until November of 1981.

Green remanded O'Sullivan in custody until Nov. 29 for sentencing.

Alan John McEwen, 27, of Edmomton, was given a 10-day jail sentence after pleading guilty to driving while under suspension.

Laughton said McEwen was stopped for speeding on Sooke Road on Oct. 24 and a check showed he was suspended in August when fined $250 in Edmonton for driving under suspension. In addition, McEwen was fined $35 for speeding.

Fined for drinking-driving convictions were: Robert Lajeunesse, 62, of Port Alberni, $400; Shirley Lois Campbell, 19, of 2630 Cook, $200; and Susan Louise Henry, 34, of 8950 West Saanich, $50.

Jury panel sent home

A jury panel of 57 persons was sent home Thursday for the second time this week when a county court trial failed to proceed.

After a one-hour delay, the panelists were advised the trial of Daniel Richard Ellis, 40, could not start because he had just been admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital suffering a heart attack.

Ellis is accused of causing bodily harm to Philip Fillion by intending to wound, maim or disfigure him in Ganges on May 19.

Earlier this week, a panel of 58 was sent away when the prosecution entered a stay of proceedings in another case.

Members of a jury panel who show up for selection are paid $10. Jurors who are picked get $20 a day.

Judge Peter Millward advised the panelists that other cases scheduled to be heard this month could not be brought forward at short notice. The next jury trial is on Tuesday.

Elsewhere in county court, Judge Millward levied a $200 fine on Kenneth Walter Peters, 22, who pleaded guilty Oct. 2 to possession of three one-ounce baggies of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking Jan. 19.

Peters said he was simply transporting the baggies for a friend and didn't realize this constituted trafficking.

Millward said no useful purpose would be served by a jail sentence and there is no need for rehabilitation. Peters has no previous criminal record as a juvenile or adult.

55% hike in loans authorized

MONTREAL (CP) — The Federal Business Development Bank says it authorized a 55-per-cent increase in loans to small businesses in Canada during the first half of 1979.

The bank, established by the federal government to help the development of small enterprises across the country, said Friday that it authorized 8,437 loans with a total value of $477 million in the six-month period which ended Sept. 30. This compares with 5,449 loans worth $285 million in the same period last year.

The bank also reported $1,839 million in outstanding loans, investments and guarantees to 37,719 Canadian enterprises.

New York

The stock market rallied sharply today amid hopes for a letup in credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve Board and a possible peak in interest rates.

Late Thursday the Federal Reserve reported a $400 million decline in the basic measure of the money supply, surprising many analysts who hadbeen expecting a substantial increase.

That added to recent tentative evidence of a slowing in monetary growth — a trend which they has been trying to encourage in an effort to restrain inflation.

As a result, hopes rose that the Federal Reserve could now pursue that goal without clamping down further on credit, and that interest rates might peak out soon.

New York's Citibank raised its prime lending rate Friday to 15½ from 15¼ per cent, with most major banks joining in the increase. But by Citibank's formula for computing the basic rate on blue-chip loans, it could have posted an even larger increase.

Amid those developments, the market showed few ill effects from the continuing tension in Iran.

Interest rates drop expected

TORONTO (CP) — Interest rates should fall substantially over the next year if the federal debt does not get further out of control, says Carl Beigie, president of the C. D. Howe Research Institute.

Beigie, an economist, said in a speech released in advance that borrowing costs are taking a larger bite out of the Canadian economy than most people realize.

He said the big bite is caused by the difference between the annual increase in the cost of living, now running at 9.6 per cent, and borrowing costs, nearly 15 per cent for conventional mortgages.

In an interview, Beigie said he thinks interest rates will tumble as the U.S. goes into a recession and the cost of living will drop.

The current high-interest policy of the U.S. central banking system is almost ensuring a depression, he said.

"When you see the recession start you will see interest rates go down significantly."

If U.S. interest rates go higher "it's really going to be a tough scene" for Canadians, he said.

Beigie, speaking to Property Forum, an annual meeting of the building development industry and the financial community, said Canada needs a major construction investment boom but Canadians must be more realistic about the size and luxury of the houses they want.

October real estate sales up 42% from 1978

By AL FORREST

Despite record high interest rates, real estate sales in October were up 42 per cent from the same time last year, the Victoria Real Estate Board said Wednesday.

Sales during the month totalled $19.8 million, up from $14 million the previous October. There were 316 sales during the month, up from 190.

"A study of the October sales shows that buyers are finding ways around the high interest rates," board president Bev Highton said.

"They are protecting any large assumable mortgage at low interest rates. By low, they usually mean less than 13 per cent.

"Two years ago that would have seemed very high."

Highton said second mortgages and vendor financing are becoming more important in house sales.

Some banks are offering special rates on second mortgages in an effort to get more money circulating. There is a surplus of loan funds in the city.

Highton said that, for example, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce is offering a second mortgage at 15.25 per cent.

Normally a second mortgage is two percentage points above a first. First mortgages now are about 14.5 per cent, putting a regular second mortgage in the range of 16.5 per cent.

Highton said it could work this way:

A $60,000 home with an existing $30,000 mortgage at 11 per cent could be bought with a $15,000 down payment and a $15,000 bank second mortgage at 15.25. The effective interest rate on the first and second mortgage combined would be less than 13 per cent, which by present standards would be low.

Or the same $60,000 house could be bought by having the seller agree to a $45,000 agreement for sale.

The buyer would give the vendor $15,000 in cash and make payments on the $45,000 to the vendor at 12 per cent interest or whatever rate is agreed.

The vendor would be responsible for the existing $30,000 mortgage.

Under this system, Highton said, the seller is making a profit of one percentage point on the $30,000 (paying out at 11 per cent and collecting at 12 per cent) and this helps to take the sting out of the fact the vendor is getting only 12 per cent interest on the remaining $15,000.

"I think we will be seeing more homes selling that way. Buyers and sellers will be doing everything they can to protect any existing mortgages where the interest rate is low."

At the same time, cash in the bank is becoming more important for buyers. With mortgage interest rates so high, large down payments will make it easier to buy a house under any system of purchase.

It would be expensive to get into high ratio mortgages at current rates of interest.

Highton said sales during the first week of November have continued to be brisk.

With housing starts slack and demand for homes increasing, the price trend is upwards.

"It takes time for these pressures to develop but with the current trend we could be facing sharp price increases by this time next year. It is almost inevitable.

"I think many people who bought in October felt that what they might lose through high interest rates they would more than make up for on the price. If they wait a year they will be paying much more on the end price."

Keith Feir of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said the special second mortgage being offered is going out at the consumer loan rate. By federal law, the second mortgage can bring the total mortgage amount to no more than 75 per cent, leaving the buyer in a situation where he must come up with 25 per cent down payment.

That means a down payment of $15,000 on a $60,000 house. With an existing first mortgage of $30,000, the maximum second mortgage from the bank would be $15,000.

Meanwhile, a report by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation showed local housing starts are still slack.

There were 201 starts during October, the same as the previous October, which was rated a poor month.

This October the starts included 134 single family homes and 67 apartment units. There were no duplexes or row houses begun during the month.

The previous October the starts had included 99 single family homes, 21 row houses and 81 apartment units.

Cominco mines icy Arctic

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Cominco Ltd. is about to embark on the development of what will be the world's most northerly metal mine — more than 200 kilometers north of the Arctic Circle.

Cominco spokesman Herb Lett said Tuesday the company will spend about $150 million to develop the "Polaris" lead-zinc deposit on Little Cornwallis Island in the Canadian high Arctic.

"It's a very rich ore, much higher than the grade at many other mines," he said. The mine will be built by Cominco subsidiary Arvik Mines Ltd., owner of the property.

Concentrates will be shipped from the mine in the Canadian ice-breaking bulk carrier, M.V. "Arctic", a Canarctic Shipping Ltd. vessel, in addition to other Canadian or European ice-strengthened vessels.

"The water's only open up there for about 26 days of the year, so we had to get cooperation from the government to have ice breakers available," Lett said.

Cominco agreed to ship 50 percent of the concentrate from the mine via Canarctic Shipping, owned 51-percent by the federal government. In addition, Cominco must spend 92 percent of the mine's capital expenditures in Canada.

Polaris ore reserves are estimated at 23 million tonnes with a grade of 14.1 percent zinc and 4.3 percent lead, Lett said. The Polaris mine will be the 11th-largest lead-zinc producer in the world once operational in early 1982.

It is expected to yield some 170,000 tonnes of zinc concentrate and 38,000 tonnes of lead concentrate annually.

Process, power and service facilities will be built in southern Canada on a barge which will then be towed to the site of Little Cornwallis for permanent berthing in the summer of 1981.

Cominco said it hopes to hire Arctic residents for "a significant portion" of the jobs at the mine.

TransCan shuffles chief executives

TORONTO (CP) — TransCanada PipeLines announced major executive changes Thursday, bringing in John M. Beddome as chairman and Radcliffe R. Latimer as president and chief executive officer.

The shuffles were caused by the retirement at the end of this month of James W. Kerr, chairman and chief executive officer who leaves after a 21-year career with the company.

The appointments are effective Dec. 1. Beddome is senior vice-president of Dome Petroleum Ltd., which recently took over control of TransCanada, while Latimer has been president of CN Rail.

Beddome, a vice-chairman of TransCanada since last June, will continue to operate from his Dome Petroleum offices in Calgary.

'Cheap shots' by Watt: Noel

An Oak Bay alderman has been accused by Saanich Ald. Sandy Noel of taking cheap shots at Saanich to get election publicity.

Noel said Wednesday Ald. Doug Watt isn't telling the whole story when he pins Camosun College's Lansdowne campus parking problem on Saanich.

Watts, an Oak Bay mayoralty candidate, said Monday Saanich banned parking on streets surrounding the campus and had diverted traffic around Lansdowne on to Foul Bay Road.

Noel is a member of an ad hoc traffic committee which he said informed Saanich and Oak Bay the parking problem could be solved if the government bought two inexpensive houses at the east end of the campus.

Noel said Watts knows that a meeting was held between representatives of the two councils.

Advance polls

Voters who will be out of town on Nov. 17 can cast their ballots at advance polls held at municipal halls around the Victoria region.

The city has five days of advance polling this year. It started last week and continues to Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at city hall, Pandora and Fisgard.

Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt have a two-day advance poll Thursday and Friday at each municipal hall during the same office hours.

In Sidney, it's just on Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at municipal hall 2440 Sidney Avenue. Neighboring North Saanich holds its advance poll Thursday and Friday during the same hours at 1620 Mills Road, while Central Saanich's is 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday and Friday at the municipal hall, 1903 Mount Newton X Road.

Residents of non-municipal electoral areas in the Capital Regional District may vote in advance Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at three locations — school board office in Sooke, CRD headquarters on Yates in Victoria and the CRD office in Ganges on Salt Spring Island.

Camosun drafts five-year budget

Education Minister Pat McGeer's request for a five-year budget plan from Camosun College was approved with reservations Thursday by the college council.

Some members felt the document could restrict the allocation of funds based only on estimates which may not have been debated by the council.

Finance committee chairman Mark Fisher said the plan would be meaningless because the council would not have sufficient time to study it before the requested deadline Dec. 15. Members will get their first look at it at their Dec. 13 meeting.

Karate tourney

One of the largest karate tournaments ever held in Victoria will take place Saturday in the old gymnasium at the University of Victoria.

And all the participants will be from just one karate club — Bateson Karate School.

About 100 combatants ranging in age from eight to 40 and from the school's four centres at Parksville, Port Alberni, Ganges and Victoria will take part in the one-day event.

There'll be team fights and demonstrations of weapons such as the tonfa, bow staff, sai and nunchako.

Measure that cord, woodbuyers warned

Shoppers for firewood could get burned by unscrupulous merchants if they do not make sure they receive the proper measure of wood, the federal consumer and corporate affairs department warned today.

The department said that the volume of wood sold as a cord is often only a quarter to a half of the legal cord measure.

Under the Weights and Measures Act a full cord of firewood has a volume of 3,625 cubic decimetres or a measure of 2.4 metres by 1.2 metres by 1.2 metres.

(Traditionally, four feet by four feet by eight feet.)

The department said consumers should ask the dealer for an invoice with a declaration of the quantity delivered.

Any irregularities should be reported to the department.

THE RIGHT TO LIVE

A Seminar of three colour films and personal addresses by

C. EVERETT KOOP, M.D.

Recognized as one of the world's most prominent surgeons.
Surgeon-in-chief at Philadelphia's Children's Hospital.
He has spent a lifetime studying the attitudes and trends of man's view of man from a medical perspective.

Dr. Koop asks this challenging question:

Can we accept the destruction of human rights?

Today, choices are being made that undermine human rights at their most basic level.
Practices once labelled "unthinkable" are now considered acceptable . . . abortion . . . infanticide . . . euthanasia.
The destruction of human life, young and old, is being sanctioned on an ever increasing scale by the medical professions, by the courts, by parents and by silent citizens.

'Missing' woman not lost

If the New Zealand police are still looking for 20-year-old Wendy Porter, they'd better send an officer to her hometown of Nanaimo.

New Zealand authorities issued a statement Thursday saying Miss Porter had been reported missing and that they and her mother were extremely concerned about her safety.

They distributed her description and photograph throughout the country in an attempt to locate her.

It turns out Miss Porter wasn't lost and had just decided to go home.

Her mother, Nellie, who was told the good news by a friend, said "She just decided to pack up and leave. The little brat."

Miss Porter left Aug. 29 with two friends, Sheila Cairns, of Ladysmith, and Dawn Gunderson, of Victoria, on a trip that took them to Hawaii, Fiji, Tonga and New Zealand.

They were planning to go to Australia but on the spur of the moment Wendy decided to come home.

She left a message for her companions but it apparently went astray. When she didn't show up at a rendezvous at a Wellington youth hostel Oct. 29, the pair became concerned and went to police.

Wendy, who got back to her Nanaimo apartment Nov. 3, is now looking for a job and says she just grew weary of travel.

"It was hot and I was beat," she said.

Chamber names Steele president

Cedric Steele has been elected president of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, succeeding Mel Cooper effective Jan. 1.

The president of Cedric Steele Realty was executive vice president this year and will be succeeded by Arne Lane.

Others elected as vice presidents for 1980 are Bob Wheaton, Ron Campion and Bill Anderson. Campion is new to the board.

Bob Siddall is secretary and Ellis Achtem treasurer.

Former chamber president John Ansell is among those elected to two-year terms as directors.

Others elected to two-year terms on the board are Don Challinor, Bob Siddall, Maurice Cownden, Stuart Bailey, Allan Ker, Glen Steeves, and Ian Cairns.

Those continuing on the board for one more year are Cooper, Steele, Wheaton, Lane, Anderson, Achtem, Karin O'Connor, Jack McKernan, Colin Shaw, and Jim Currie.

The incoming and outgoing executives will hold a weekend seminar at Parksville at month's end to begin planning for the 1980 term.

One proposal likely to be adopted at the seminar is to reduce the chamber's 12 standing committees to four — transportation, economic development, community affairs and administration.

Commerce city's bank

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce was awarded the city's banking business for a period of five years Thursday night.

Ald. Bill McElroy questioned whether the city should patronize a bank which sectors of the union movement are boycotting because it is refusing to sign a first contract at certain branches with the Union of Bank Employees.

Mayor Mike Young said what a union does need not affect the city, although he was no defender of the chartered banks.

Open Space still exempt

The Open Space gallery on lower Fort Street had its property tax exemption restored Thursday night after manager Jeanne Celona presented a brief containing pleas from several prominent members of the local arts community.

A committee of council had originally balked because of Open Space's former reputation for disorganization and the fact that the Law Centre occupies much about 40 per cent of the floor space of the building.

City teachers reach accord in salary talks

Tentative agreement has been reached between teachers and Greater Victoria School District in 1980 salary negotiations.

No specifics have been released pending recommendations to be made to Greater Victoria Teachers' Association and District 61 trustees Monday.

The preliminary agreement is between the bargaining representatives of the parties. Trustee John Young, chairman of the board's bargaining team, said a contract settlement would be recommended when trustees meet.

Trevor Calkins, GVTA president, said the association's negotiators would recommend acceptance to teachers.

If agreement is not reached by Nov. 15, a contract will be settled by Dec. 31 via binding arbitration, as has occurred in the district 13 times in the past 15 years.

Administrators told school trustees considering 1980 estimates last week that 8.5 per cent had been allowed for teacher salary increases, based upon current settlements with public employees.

Mandarins less

Mandarin oranges, a sure sign Christmas is coming, will cost less this year.

Retailers say crops in Japan were larger and healthier this year, meaning lower costs for the Christmas stocking-stuffers.

Retailers are unable to predict the exact price until shipping costs are known, but spokesmen for Canada Safeway and Woodward's say prices will be lower.

Last year, a box of Japanese mandarin oranges cost between $5 and $6. Retailers said shipments will be larger this year because the reduced prices will increase consumer demand.

Engineer class eyed for UVic

A proposal to offer a bachelor degree in engineering at the University of Victoria received initial support Wednesday from the senate's planning committee.

Committee chairman Dr. Alfred Fischer was given authority to proceed with development of a proposed program. His report may be ready for senate reconsideration in a month.

Fischer noted B.C., on a per capita basis, rates last out of seven provinces which turn out graduate engineers, physicians and commerce students. UBC is expanding its medical school, and UVic is about to offer more to commerce-minded students, leaving the need for engineers unattended.

B.C. industry and government employ about 11 per cent of Canadian engineers, while UBC graduates only around 4 per cent, Fischer's study shows.

Canadian studies promoted

A further step toward programs in Canadian studies was taken Wednesday by the University of Victoria senate.

The president's committee on Canadian studies, consisting of about eight members of faculty and two students, will proceed first by consulting other university groups for guidance or proposals.

Terms are to consult senate committees, faculty and departments regarding the enhancement and promotion of courses, programs and research relating to Canadian culture, social, physical and technological aspects of Canadian conditions.

In other business, law student Elizabeth Hannan was named chairman of the senate appeals committee, replacing law Prof. Lyman Robinson.

ANAFV route

Members of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans of Canada will leave 1001 Wharf Street at 10:15 a.m. Sunday for a parade to the Cenotaph at the legislative buildings.

Medals should be worn with both uniforms or civilian clothes.

Regina gets CBC nod but Victoria plan dead

CBC has no plans to proceed with its Victoria television station even though Regina is getting a $19 million complex after all.

The Crown corporation dropped plans for both stations last fall when faced with federal government budget cuts.

Len Lauk, CBC regional director for B.C., said the capital cities can't be compared because Regina already has CBC broadcasting stations scattered around the city while Victoria has only an empty building on Blanshard.

CBC lost its Victoria licence after failing to meet the broadcast startup time imposed by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission.

Lauk said CBC would only reconsider its Victoria televison proposal if the CRTC set aside Channel 10 (the only remaining free channel) for its future use.

The CRTC will hold hearings in Victoria this month but it would be inappropriate for CBC to submit a brief or encourage other groups to do so on its behalf in light of its failure to meet the original broadcast deadline.

The $3 million building is still for sale.

'Blitz' dirty word to Lions

Times News Services

Mention the word blitz to British Columbia Lions and shivers run down the spines of quarterbacks Joe Paopao and Mike Nott.

The Lions were unable to cope with blitzing defences during most of the Canadian Football League season and their weakness was over-exposed in last Saturday's 25-17 loss to Edmonton when the Eskimos blitzed B.C. for seven quarterback sacks.

B.C. is sure to face more blitzes Saturday in Calgary when they meet the Stampeders in the Western Football Conference semi-final.

"Sure, the blitz gave us lots of trouble this season and we've worked hard every week in preparing for it," coach Vic Rapp of the Lions said Thursday.

"It's a funny thing, the blitz, because teams which used three-man defensive lines were successful against us with the blitz, yet teams with four down linemen didn't cause us quite the same problems when they blitzed."

Calgary, unlike Edmonton, uses a four-man defensive front four led by tackle Ed McAleney, who had 26 personal sacks this season. Ends Lyall Woznesensky and Reggie Lewis, plus tackle Ken Dombrowski, complete the Calgary line.

The Stampeders didn't blitz much this season because of pressure put on opposing quarterbacks by the front four but might use more pass rushers Saturday because B.C. has shown its vulnerability to this defence.

And, that's why Rapp wishes he still had Jerry Tagge in the lineup. The veteran quarterback has been sidelined since Sept. 9 with a knee injury.

"We're working with Joe (Paopao) every day and he's completely devoted to correcting his weaknesses," said Rapp. "But you just can't replace experience when it comes to the playoffs."

Paopao, 24, was taxied a year ago and released prior to this season. He was activated after the first month, however, and performed exceptionally well until the last month of the season.

Saturday's game between Calgary and B.C. will be televised on channel 8 starting at 1 p.m. PST. Sunday's game between Ottawa and Hamilton will be televised nationally by the CBC at 11 a.m.

B.C., 9-6-1, lost its last four games of the regular season to finish in third place in the conference. One of those losses was 37-32 to Calgary which took advantage of numerous turnovers.

Rapp has redesigned the interior of the B.C. defence after injuries to tackles Doug Seymour and Frank Landy plus middle linebacker Sam Britts left the Lions vulnerable to the run.

Canadian Glen Jackson, an all-star performer at outside linebacker for several seasons, has moved into the middle and import Mike Blanton has taken over one of the defensive tackle spots.

Although he feels he has shored up the weakness against the run, Rapp said he is concerned about coverage of Calgary slotback Willie Armstead on pass patterns.

Calgary, 12-4, has speedy receivers in Armstead and Kelvin Kirk, plus the disciplined inside pass routes of Tom Forzani. Backs Burden and Sykes also are used extensively as pass receivers by quarterback Ken Johnson.

The Stamps won two of three league games against B.C. and the Lions were fortunate to gain an 18-17 decision in August. Paopao threw a last-play touchdown pass to veteran Jim Young in that one.

In Ottawa, quarterback Condredge Holloway says Sunday's sudden-death Eastern Football Conference semi-final against Hamilton Tiger-Cats is a showdown against a tough defensive unit — and not against former team-mate Tom Clements.

"No way I'm playing against Tom Clements," Holloway said. "I'm playing against 12 defensive guys. I've got to look out for a tough 'Cat in Ziambiasi." he said.

Ben Ziambiasi, Hamilton's outside linebacker, is the conference nominee as outstanding defensive player in the country.

FIGHTING COACH, B.C. Lions' Vic Rapp showed up at news conference in Vancouver wearing boxing gloves.

DARRYL SITTLER

. . . dragged over coals

TORONTO (CP) — Darryl Sittler, publicly dragged over the coals with a few of his Toronto Maple Leaf teammates by general manager Punch Imlach, returned a sharply-directed mouthful at his boss Thursday.

In an interview in St. Louis, the Leaf captain said he and other players on the National Hockey League club are upset about moves and statements by Imlach.

"I wouldn't say there's a lack of communication between Punch Imlach and the players," Sittler said. "There's no communication at all."

Sittler opened up after being informed of a selection of choice Imlach darts thrown during radio and television broadcasts of Wednesday's game in St. Louis, which Leafs won 7-4 over the Blues.

Imlach said during a discussion on a post-game television show he felt Sittler was playing as though he still had not recovered fully from torn knee ligaments suffered last season.

Imlach said during the radio broadcast of the game and again on the post-game television show that Sittler would be available in trade for any NHL all-star.

Sittler used to be an all-star, he said, but "might have lost a step or two."

Last week, Sittler, high-scoring right winger Lanny McDonald and defenceman Ian Turnbull, Leaf veterans around whom the club has been built in recent years, were among a group of players placed on waivers — then recalled.

The move by Imlach was interpreted as a manoeuvre to see which other NHL teams were interested in trades. The players, said Sittler, didn't appreciate the fact they were not advised. They were upset when they learned through newspapers that they'd been placed on waivers.

Sittler said the players have reacted to management moves by pulling together. There is no dissension among the players, he stressed.

As for Imlach's comments on his knee, Sittler said the knee is healthy and he has had no problem with it.

"But there are nights when you're sluggish. I'm sure Guy Lafleur doesn't have a great game every night, either."

Sittler, 29, is in his 10th season with the Leafs.

But he doesn't deny that Imlach's way of doing things has been upsetting.

"Does it upset us? I think it does."

Sittler has a no-trade clause in his contract but his agent, Bill Watters, said in Toronto on Thursday that Sittler would be willing to waive the clause in return for a lump-sum payment.

Watters placed a price tag of $500,000 on the clause, saying Imlach had called to discuss it.

Ruel's role hit by Lafleur; Geoffrion defends system

Times News Services

Assistant coach Claude Ruel of the National Hockey League's Montreal Canadiens reacted with bitterness Thursday to criticism voiced by right winger Guy Lafleur, saying: "What he said is not honest."

Lafleur was reported as saying on the team's charter flight home from a game Wednesday night at Pittsburgh that Ruel was part of the reason the team has been struggling this season under first-year coach Bernie Geoffrion.

The Canadiens have an 8-3-3 record that would be considered good anywhere else but seems only adequate to Montreal's critical fandom. They rallied for a 3-3 tie against the Penguins.

"I don't want to create any dissension, but Claude should revert to the role he had before," Lafleur had said, referring to Ruel's work under the departed Scotty Bowman. "If he wants to coach, let him go behind the bench. If not, then let Bernard do what he wants.

"Right now, Geoffrion is getting too many directives and consultations between periods and games and he doesn't know where to turn."

Ruel was upset and said he would talk to managing director Irving Grundman about what to do. "If Boomer does not want me here, then I will go somewhere else," Ruel said, referring to Geoffrion.

Geoffrion, angry enough about the incident to call some players off the ice at practice to talk about it, defended Ruel.

"If he goes, I go," said Geoffrion.

Lafleur had said Ruel should serve Geoffrion the way he did Bowman.

"But you have to understand the situation," Lafleur said. "Geoffrion just arrived here and he's not strong enough yet to take control of the situation. The sooner he does, the better."

Defenceman Larry Robinson said earlier he didn't believe the coaching change was responsible for the Canadiens' start.

"Basically, the coach hasn't tried to change things," Robinson said. "Unintentionally, we kind of feel that he's trying to let us play a little different, which is not true. He said time and time again he doesn't want to change our style because we have been successful that way.

"Maybe because of the way Scotty said and did things, we listened a little more," said Robinson.

"Geoffrion is a lot friendlier. You know you can talk to him a lot better. Now we don't have that uptight feeling off the ice. But now when we get on the ice, we are more tight. It's almost the complete opposite of what was going on before."

In NHL action Thursday, Boston Bruins defeated Edmonton Oilers 4-2 and Buffalo Sabres skated to a 3-3 stalemate with Chicago Black Hawks.

In Boston, Bobby Schmautz continued his torrid early-season scoring pace with his eighth goal in 12 games as the Bruins extended their unbeaten streak to five games. Wayne Cashman, Bobby Lalonde and Dick Redmond also scored for the Bruins.

Dan Newman and Pat Price scored for the Oilers.

In Buffalo, Grant Mulvey's second goal of the game at 13:07 of the third period earned the Black Hawks a tie.

Seattle skating to respectability

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Seattle Breakers, by Bill Moore's reckoning, are "a year or two away" from reaping the benefits of proper player development but some of the other changes instigated by the new owners of the Western Hockey League team are starting to pay off.

By virtue of having beaten Victoria twice in succession — and the only team to defeat the Cougars at all this season — the Breakers have attained some early-season respectability.

The fierce rivalry in the Western Division is supposed to blossom between the Cougars and Portland Winter Hawks, now running 1-2 atop the standings.

"Let them think that," said Moore, the gung-ho Seattle manager. "No one expects us to win. If they're not preparing for us, our job will be just that much easier.

"Our won-lost record is 6-9. It could have been 9-6. We gave away at least three games in the last minute, including one to Portland when they scored with three seconds left in the game.

"They stung us when we didn't have (Tom) Marsh on defence. Without him on the left point, it hurt.

"We could have stumbled Tuesday (in a 4-2 victory over the Cougars at Memorial Arena), but Marsh gave us the steadying influence."

Moore and coach Monte Miron, back in Victoria for another tango with the Cougars on Saturday night, both agree "there is a lot of work to do, but we're getting there."

Marsh, who suffered a hip-pointer, is back at operating health but Miron can hardly wait for the return of Greg Lynott, recovering from a knee operation. Lynott, obtained in a deal with Regina Pats, "was our best defenceman in training camp," said Miron, "and we're going to have a lot of surprises for everyone when he returns."

Lynott, who started skating this week, is about two weeks away from game action.

Miron, son of Colorado Rockies' manager Ray Miron, has the Breakers skating and playing solid postional hockey but Moore feels the "great change" in the club "is in the dressing room. I'm very impressed with the attitude."

Although the Breakers' sale did not take place officially until after last season, Moore and the new owners inherited the Seattle player list last Feb. 1.

"It was brutal," Moore said of the 90-man list. "Just as the development was brutal.

"Of the 90 on the list last February, only 17 are still with us.

"And when you look down our roster, there are only four or five players who actually could be considered as being developed in the Breakers' system."

Goalkeeper Ken Hodge, defencemen Marsh, Lynott, Mike Hallat, Gary Haight, and forwards Joe Ward, Alan and Brian Graves, Tom Stanger, Chuck Beucker, Dean Postlewaite and John Strait were the prominent Seattle players obtained through trades.

"Everybody gave us hell when we traded George Walter to Portland for Postlewaite and Dave Williams (playing as an affiliate in tier two ranks)," says Moore, "They said Walter was the franchise. Ask the Winter Hawks today and, if they're honest, they'll probably say they're sorry they made the deal."

"But the key to a successful franchise isn't through trading. It's in development of your own.

"With the list we have now, we feel we're going to be very competitive for the next five years."

"As for this year, we're very happy with the way things are coming along. We're 2-3 against the Cougars. Saturday night we could be 3-3."

In the only WHL game Thursday, rookie Vaughn Karpan scored two goals to pace Brandon Wheat Kings to an 8-7 victory over visiting Lethbridge Broncos in a fight-strewn game played before 1,837 fans.

Referee Ken Wheeler of Saskatoon handed out a total of 150 minutes in penalties, mainly in the roughly-played first and second periods.

The Broncos were assessed 10 of 15 minors and two of three misconducts while the teams split 18 majors.

Winter-time activities high in satisfaction

Snow is already starting to accumulate on the higher peaks of Vancouver Island — heralding what to some people is the best time of the year.

Rather than sitting indoors and complaining about the winter weather, more and more people are discovering the advantages of continuing their outdoor activities throughout the year

What to do?

There's a variety of activities to suit even the most jaded palate.

Skiing (either alpine or cross-country), snowshoing, steelheading, fishing in the salt-chuck for bright and sassy winter chinooks, tobogganing, hiking wild and stormy shorelines, skating on backcountry lakes and snowmobiling are a few of the more popular winter-time pursuits.

The accent is on action. But any of the activities can be paced to suit your individual taste.

And with the space-age materials available today, even camping in the winter is relatively easy.

People who stay close to hearth and home during that time of the year are missing out.

It's far easier to keep warm during the winter than to maintain your cool during the summer.

In addition, the insects which serve to plague summer activities of any sort have disappeared along with the crowds at all the popular camping and hiking spots.

Snow tends to impart a magical quality to the outdoors. It smooths out the rough edges of the landscape, particularly in areas that have been logged, and creates a muffled silence which isn't found in any other season.

Of course, you have to establish priorities.

This writer is hooked on alpine skiing and snowshoing — one a gregarious activity and the other a solitary pursuit — and both mesh nicely with outdoor photography, a year-round hobby.

Unfortunately, this leaves no time for steelheading — another sport I'd like to try.

So make an early New Year's resolution.

Accumulate some basic knowledge and try and get a little more active this winter.

The rewards are worthwhile.

NIBBLES: The provincial government has come up with a new policy on commercial ski guiding in British Columbia.

While it's laudable the onus is being placed on the industry to upgrade its own safety standards, I hope this isn't the thin edge of a wedge leading to more bureaucratic meddling.

This type of activity, like parachuting, mountaineering and scuba diving, is based on assumed risks.

It's the risk itself which provides much of the challenge and satisfaction in such ventures and eliminating the element of danger leaves only a shell without any substance.

Logging road travellers should note that all operations on Vancouver Island will be taking Monday off, so roads will be open for recreational use Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Best to continue with Whitecaps

VANCOUVER (CP) — President and general manager John Best of Vancouver Whitecaps will remain with the North American Soccer League team for at least another year after reaching an agreement with team chairman Herb Capozzi.

Best signed a three-year contract, expiring Dec. 1, when he joined the Whitecaps in 1976.

Case of shorts no big bother

Even with half the team missing and using only four players for the final 11 minutes of the game, Henderson Realty had enough punch to drop DataTech 100-81 at Cedar Hill Junior High School in one of two Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League games Thursday.

In the other tussle, defending-champion Ivy's Strathcona Hotel rallied from a 64-54 deficit to edge Trilec Juniors 72-70 at Central Junior High School.

Unbeaten Henderson Realty was missing Ken Sheilds, Jim Duddridge and Norm Vickery, who are in Lethbridge with the University of Victoria Vikings, and Rob Parris was working.

Peter Domongoni took up most of the slack to set the pace with 36 points. Chris Trumpy added 20 points and Tom Hatcher contributed 19 for Henderson while Bob Burrows sank 40 for DataTech.

Lorne Dakin (32) and Grant Boland (26) were the top guns for Ivy's, who came up with 14 straight points in a late rally.

Gord Lee set the pace for Trilec, who led 50-38 at the half, with 20 points.

HOCKEY COACH QUITS

Affiliation not necessary for Turkey Head's regatta

The Turkey Head Sailing Association is holding an unusual type of regatta in the Cadboro Bay-Willows Beach area on Saturday, Nov. 17.

Normally, to get on the racing circuit, the skipper has to belong to a recognized club. This event is open to all sailboats, regardless of affiliation with any sailing organization, and should be of interest to those who have yet to try the racing game.

Commodore Gerry Porter says the fun aspect of racing will be stressed and a special welcome is guaranteed for novices. There will be two races. The registration fee of $10 will include tickets for two couples to the annual THSA dance and social evening, to be held at the Victoria Edelweiss Club in James Bay that evening. Additional tickets for crew and friends will sell at $5 per couple.

Registration forms for the regatta are now available at Bosun's Locker on Johnston Street, McQuade's Ship Chandlers on Wharf Street and Sailtrend on Oak Bay Avenue.

Registrations will be accepted up until 5 p.m. on the Friday and a skippers' meeting will be held at 8:30 a.m. on race day at Oak Bay Marina.

Gerry says, providing the weather co-operates, a raft-up party will be held near the Marina at the end of the day's racing.

A special invitation has gone out to the enthusiastic Hobie Cat and Windsurfer fleets to run races in the same area in conjunction with the regatta.

If you would like to know more about the regatta give Gerry a ring at 592-3184 during the evening or Barry Wilton at 477-4309.

The Hobie Cats' Brian McLeod reports they will be racing off Willows Beach this coming Sunday, starting around 11 a.m. after a skippers' meeting at 10 a.m. Last weekend 30 people trailered 10 of the fleet's boats up to Long Beach to enjoy sailing in the surf. It was such a success they plan to have a similar sortie in the spring.

The executive of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, decided this week to hold fall and winter racing for the squadron's cruising class boats and Sailerettes. Normally, the boats are hauled out at this time but the new breakwaters have made mooring safe all year round.

There will be six races, starting on Sunday. Because it is Remembrance Day, the race is scheduled for 1 p.m. to allow members to attend remembrance services. The other races will all begin at 11 a.m.

Neil Barrett and his crew were the big winners last Sunday. Their Sailerette Green Teal came first in both Sailerette and cruising class competition, winning the coveted Gearbuster Trophy.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club will have two around-the-buoys races on Sunday. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. On Saturday the club's dinghy sailors will have series racing, beginning at 1:30 p.m. There will also be an opening day sailpast for DEMBOS (Davidsons, El Toros, Mintos and Sabots).

A total of 47 boats took part in the Canoe Bay Sailing Club's six-miler, sailed in waters off Sidney on Saturday. The overall winner was Holger Brix's Caliente. Then came Gerry Guest's Auriga, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Bent Jespersen's Polyestermite, John Barker's Interlude, David Miles' T'Ai, Jim Morris' Madeleine, Gordie Inglis' Water Mellon, Jack Patterson's Leesome and Bill Stewart's Sea-Quel.

There will be a 7½-miler this Sunday, starting at 10 a.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf at Sidney.

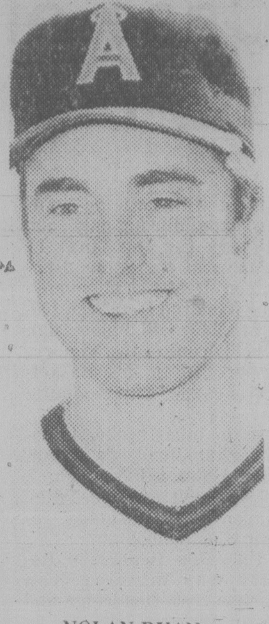
John Newton and the crew that raced with him aboard Pachena in this year's Admiral's Cup were presented this week in Vancouver with prints of their boat and the other two boats — Evergreen and Magistri — that made up the Canadian team.

The prints were taken from a water color painted by marine artist Oswald K. Schenk on the commission of the Mumm Champagne Company. The artist researched and painted secretly the three boats under their best point of sail. The result is an action-filled scenario of them under spinnaker.

A limited edition of prints was produced and these sell for $25; an ideal Christmas gift for the boater who seems to have everything. Mail your cheque or money order to International Wines and Spirits Ltd., 111 Avenue Road, Suite 401, Toronto, Ontario, M5R 3J8. Proceeds will be given to the Canadian Yachting Association to help defray the costs of a Canadian team in the 1981 Admiral's Cup.

Watson, May to Yanks; are Kison, Ryan next?



NOLAN RYAN
. . . keeps options open

Times News Services

"Surprising and overwhelming" were the adjectives slugger Bob Watson used to describe the contract offer that led him to major league baseball's New York Yankees.

Watson and pitcher Rudy May became the latest free agents hooked by Yankees owner George Steinbrenner. And there could be more to come, like pitcher Bruce Kison.

Kison, like Watson, is represented by lawyer Tom Reich, who admittedly likes the straightforward negotiating techniques of the American League team's owner.

"He very definitely has an understanding of the economics of baseball in this time and place and not some other time and place 10 years ago," said Reich.

That understanding resulted in a four-year contract worth close to $2 million for Watson, the 33-year-old first baseman, and a three-year deal of about $1 million for May, who is 35.

Watson was the Yankees' No. 1 selection in last week's re-entry draft and May was picked No. 4.

"We tried to trade for Bob when he was with Houston (Astros) last year and we moved too slowly," Steinbrenner said. "I was determined not to move too slowly this time."

The Astros swapped Watson to Boston instead and he hit a productive .337 in the second half of the 1979 season for the Red Sox. But Boston failed to satisfy his contract demands until after he went into the re-entry draft.

"If they had offered me in August and September what they offered after I was a free agent, I'd have signed with them," Watson said.

May, virtually unused in the first half of the season in Montreal, came alive with a 10-3 record and 2.30 earned-run average in the second half for the Expos.

In Alvin, Texas, Nolan Ryan, who became a free agent after the 1979 season, says he will not return to California Angels and has whittled his shopping list to four teams, two of them in his home state of Texas.

Besides Texas Rangers and Houston Astros, Ryan, 32, a veteran pitcher, said he is negotiating with the Yankees and Milwaukee Brewers.

In Toronto, it was announced that John Felske, who managed Vancouver Canadians to a first-place finish in 1979 in the Pacific Coast League, has been appointed to a coaching position with the Blue Jays.

His appointment completes Toronto's coaching staff for 1980 under new manager Bob Mattick. Previously announced were Bobby Doerr, the returning batting instructor, pitching coach Al Widmar, Denis Menke and Jimy Williams.

In Kansas City, baseball owners and officials concluded a two-day informational meeting with no announcements.

"We basically had a seminar," said Joe Burke, general manager of Kansas City Royals. "This time of year there are a whole lot of things on everybody's mind. The winter meetings (in Toronto next month), player trades, the Oakland-Denver situation, the player agreement that ends Dec. 31."

Crack field entered at Laurel

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — Greentree Stable's favored Bowl Game has drawn the No. 7 post position in the starry field of eight horses entered for Saturday's $200,000 Washington, D.C., International.

Golden Act, one of four United States entries in the 1½-mile turf race and contending with Bowl Game for the North American grass championship, drew the No. 2 position. Golden Act, to be ridden by Sandy Hawley of Mississauga, Ont., won last month's Canadian International Championship on the Marshall turf course at Woodbine Racetrack in Toronto.

Bowl Game, a five-year-old gelding, will carry 127 pounds and was rated a 5-2 choice in early odds.

Golden Act, which placed in the Triple Crown races this season, will carry 120 pounds as a three-year-old and was rated a 3-1 second choice.

Le Marmot, a French entry which finished second in the French Derby and the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe, will break from the rail and was listed at 6-1.

Dom Alaric, representing Canada for a syndicate headed by E.P. Taylor of Toronto, will break from the No. 3 post. On the outside of him will be Native Courier, from the U.S., Trillion, and Son of Love II. Waya will break from the outside.

Native Courier was listed at 5-1 in the prerace line, Le Marmot and Trillion, another French entry, were both listed as 6-1, Waya of the U.S. 8-1, Dom Alarac 12-1 and Son of Love II, of France, 15-1.

Pistons fire coach

Times News Services

Dick Vitale was fired Thursday as coach of Detroit Pistons, little more than a year after he took over at the helm of the National Basketball Association team.

Vitale and Oscar Feldman, the club's legal counsel, said that Vitale and Piston officials "mutually agreed to relieve Dick of his duties."

Feldman said a search will be conducted to find a replacement and that assistant coach Richie Adubato will assume the head coach duties on an interim basis.

Feldman refused to elaborate on the reason for Vitale's dismissal, which came one day after the Pistons dropped their fifth straight game, a 115-107 loss to Atlanta Hawks. They are in last place in the Central Division with a 4-8 mark.

Portland Trail Blazers arrived in Milwaukee Thursday with statistically the best defence in the NBA but they couldn't stop Brian Winters.

Their fast break slowed to a crawl by the towering and hustling Blazers, Milwaukee Bucks instead waited for Winters to work free amidst a maze of picks around the key. The bearded guard sank 10 of 19 field goal attempts and scored all but six of his 24 points in the second half, leading the Bucks to a 98-89 victory in a showdown of the NBA's Western Conference divisional leaders.

Denver Nuggets beat Utah Jazz 96-92 in the only other NBA game Thursday night as Johnny Roche scored five points in the final minute, including three straight free throws with 30 seconds to go after Utah had closed to 93-92.

Alberta, St. Mary's in final

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Golden Bears qualified for the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union soccer final Thursday by scoring three overtime goals and blanking number-one rated Laurentian Voyageurs 3-0.

The Bears now will play St. Mary's Huskies for the national championship here Sunday. Huskies defeated Concordia Stingers 6-4 earlier Thursday in the other CIAU semifinal, earning a 4-2 edge in penalty kicks after being tied 2-2 after 90 minutes of regulation time and two 15-minute halves of overtime.

Rudy Bartholomew, a Trinidadian native and first-year Bear, ended the scoreless tie by beating goalkeeper Carlo Greco with a hard left-footed shot from 22 yards out in the 11th minute of the first half of overtime.

Claudia Perusco and Franco Bruni scored Alberta's other goals in the game played in -3C temperatures.

U.S. takes Tehran crisis to UN

Palestine Liberation Organization mediation team has begun talks with Iranian authorities and student militants.

A PLO source in Turkey reported that PLO representatives are in contact with both Khomeini and the students who stormed the embassy last Sunday.

The PLO source in Ankara, who asked not to be identified, said the Palestinians are seeking the release of a few hostages as a first step toward ending the standoff.

Earlier reports said that the students had rejected the PLO mediation team.

It was further reported from Beirut that the some left-wing Palestinian guerrilla groups are opposed to any PLO intervention in Tehran.

The PLO thwarted a plan by 40 armed Iranians to storm the U.S. embassy in the Lebanese capital 48 hours after the seizure of the U.S. embassy in Tehran, Lebanese security sources said Thursday.

The highly-placed sources told reporters the Iranians are being detained in a refugee camp near the southern Lebanese town of Nabatiyeh. The town is run by Yasser Arafat's relatively moderate Al Fatah guerrilla group.

Tehran Radio said representatives of the Red Cross — the Red Lion in Iran — were allowed into the embassy today and found the hostages to be in good condition. But the PLO source said the Red Lion reported some are suffering from "mental duress."

The Turkish ambassador in Tehran, Turgut Tolumen, also visited the embassy, Saudi Arabian radio reported. U.S. state department officials said they were informed Tolumen might try to negotiate with the students.

Earlier, thousands of Iranian demonstrators marched on the embassy, chanting "Death to America!"

It has also been reported that the U.S. charge d'affaires in Tehran, Bruce Laingen, — shelter in the Iranian foreign ministry since Sunday's embassy seizure — had been arrested and placed under heavy guard.

Meanwhile, the Canadian government is in "almost hourly" contact with its embassy in Iran and has contingency plans to evacuate 60 Canadians if the current unrest threatens them, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald says.

She told reporters some Canadians left Iran Wednesday night without any interference and officials are encouraging all remaining Canadians to leave the country.

There are 17 Canadian nationals working at the Canadian embassy in Tehran. The remaining 43 work in private industry or are married to Iranian citizens.

Today, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat joined a growing list of world leaders offering to help, saying he would fly the shah in his personal jet to Egypt. The shah himself has said he would leave the U.S. if it would help secure the release of the hostages, but doctors say he is too ill to be moved.

It is understood the U.S. government still is refusing to be pressured into extraditing or otherwise moving the shah from New York, where the former occupant of the peacock throne was said to be spending hours praying for the safety of the hostages.

Officials in several other countries, including Pakistan and the Vatican have also offered their help.

And diplomatic sources reported today that the U.S. embassy in Moscow has asked the Soviet government to help obtain the hostages' release.

President Carter, whose own peace mission through two personal envoys failed just two days ago, has reacted by halting shipments of spare military parts to Iran during the crisis and underscored his concern by postponing a two-day state visit to Canada.

But Prime Minister Clark, who announced Carter's decision in the Commons Thursday, said the two leaders hoped to re-schedule the meeting early in the new year. Meanwhile, Canadian and U.S. cabinet members would talk about some of the urgent issues.

One of the most urgent is Carter's Dec. 6 deadline for choosing a route to ship Alaskan oil to the lower 48 states. Carter's decision will be sent to Congress for approval.

Ottawa opposes proposed oil tanker routes along the B.C. coast, fearing spills and pollution.

Final night was rough but youth exchange program members didn't complain

Off the floor and off to India

By PAT DUFOUR

The last day in Victoria for the seven Canadians and seven East Indians who have been here since Aug. 31 in a Canada World Youth exchange program proved a bit spartan.

The 14 young people at 522 Simcoe had no pots or pans for cooking and ended up sleeping on bare floors but they made the best of it.

Earlier that day they had returned the beds and other equipment loaned to them for their stay in Victoria.

But they weren't downhearted — for they are off soon to India.

At the end of the month the group will head for the state of Hariana, near Delhi, where they will help provide adult education in some of the villages.

Also going to India is a similar group which has spent the past weeks in Duncan.

This is the first year that India has taken part in the Canada World Youth program, joining countries from Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean.

Founded on April 16, 1971, the program is mainly subsidized by the Canadian International Development Agency.

From the first day, the participants study either French or English, as well as the language of the country they will visit for the first time.

In both Canada and the other country, they involve themselves in community service.

Mona Oikawa, of Toronto, is in charge of the Canadian contingent and Prem Tyagi leads the group from India.

While here, most of the 14 participants involved themselves in the James Bay area, working at the centre or teaching at the James Bay Community School.

On the last day, Grade 3 students who had been taught by Louise Misson, of Quebec, came to say goodbye.

Taking time out from packing service cots and mattresses on a truck, some of the young Indians told of their experiences.

When they first arrived in Victoria each was paired off with a Canadian, spending some while in a home billet.

For Balakrishna, who comes from Mysore, it was the first time in his life he had washed dishes.

He liked the experience and also enjoyed working for the Victoria International Development Education Association.

At home, 23-year-old Dilip Sangwikar works in a hotel and appreciated the catering instruction he was given by Empress Hotel manager Ted Balderson.

Stephen Rosario, who hails from Pondicherry, is proud that he now has 3½ languages — Hindi, Tamil, English and a smattering of French — picked up from Louise and 18-year-old Pierre Ouellette of Montreal.

Joshing, Pierre told Stephen he will send him "comics, milk chocolate and, maybe, letters" once the eight-month program is completed.

All of the young people agreed that the first few months have formed them into an international family and say proof lies in their meals — a mixture of North American dishes and traditional Indian favorites like curry.

TOWN TALK

Reaching the century mark merits a bit of heel-kicking even if one's reputation is definitely on the tedious side of propriety, like the Union Club.

So the 1,000-member club on Gordon Street marked its centenary the other night with a gala that included two dance bands and a disco.

A disco? At the Union Club?

Not so strange, said one of the dancers, remaining discreetly anonymous in disclosing the typical members' age has dropped to about 50.

But flashing lights and an electric beat pulsing out of the library apparently upset people at The Empress, and duly, around 11 p.m., two policemen dropped by to point out the noise was filtering across the street.

A bit of cheek, considering the rowdies and racket that have spilled out of the hotel's Beaver pub for years, the member muttered.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis was somewhat surprised to see himself depicted as a nasty spoilsport in last Friday's Times.

In a story on the future of the Emily Carr Art Centre, the minister was quoted as saying he didn't want it to become a "sterile museum." It should heave "people doing things and having some fun," we said he said.

The unfortunate typo in what was supposed to be the word "have" conjures up a picture of stalwart guards throwing out people who appear to be enjoying themselves.

This Monday will be a Remembrance Day holiday for some, but not for students in the provincial school system.

For them it will be business as usual, a regular day of classes.

The kids will have to wait until next year — when Nov. 11 falls on a Tuesday — for a late fall holiday.

Trade unionists in Oak Bay are going to have to wing it when voting in the Nov. 17 municipal election . . . they're not getting any guidance from their leaders.

Peter James, chairman of the Victorial Labor Council's municipal affairs committee, told delegates this week the committee can't recommend any of the 12 hopefuls running in Oak Bay.

The committee couldn't find anything good to say about the mayoralty candidates in Victoria or Saanich either but did recommend unionists in North Saanich vote for Eric Sherwood, in a three-way race for the top job with incumbent George Westwood and Owen Philp.

Student loan recipients are pretty good at paying back loans, says Statistics Canada.

Of the $1.2 billion lent in the past 15 years, only $104.7 million has been defaulted.

And of that sum, $35 million was recovered and $1.9 million written off as death claims by two collection agencies working overtime for the Canada Student Loan Plan Program.

Outgoing Saanich alderman David Paterson has chastised fellow council members for allowing election fever to get the better of them.

All those election signs on municipal property have got to go, Paterson told certain aldermen up for re-election this year.

Posting election hype on public land is in contravention of municipal bylaws, according to Paterson, who said the aldermen should know better.

Paterson could afford to be holier-than-thou. He isn't running this time around.

Suite vacancies lowest in nation

Victoria's apartment vacancy rate has fallen to 0.1 per cent, the lowest in the country, Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation reported in Ottawa today.

The rate is down from 1.7 per cent in April.

Vancouver was the second-lowest at 0.2 per cent and St. John's, Nfld., third-lowest at 0.9 per cent.

Victoria apartment owners had expected the rate to be under one per cent but the rating of 0.1 per cent came as a surprise.

It is the lowest ever in Victoria.

The rate had been 4.4 per cent in April, 1977, but has been on the decline ever since.

It fell to 2.5 per cent in October, 1977, and down to 1.1 per cent in October of 1978.

It rose to 1.7 in April of this year before falling away to virtually nil.

Apartment owners said the lack of construction in the Victoria area inevitably would lead to this type of shortage.

CMHC rates three per cent as a good balance between landlords and renters.

The figures exclude apartments completed within the past six months. When those totals are added in, the Victoria rate becomes 0.2 per cent, still the lowest in Canada, and Vancouver becomes 0.3 per cent.

Meanwhile, rents have been rising in Victoria as a reflection of the apartment shortage.

Some tenants feel they can automatically protest a rent hike if it exceeds 7 per cent.

But that's incorrect.

In fact, there are many exclusions from rental controls and landlords can in some cases increase rents by 10 to 24 per cent.

Here are some of the cases which would provide exceptions to the 7 per cent limit.

If your rental unit has been significantly renovated, the landlord might be allowed a greater-than-normal increase.

Certain areas of the province have been excluded from controls, as have some classes of residences.

If your landlord has lived in a unit for 24 or more consecutive months since Jan. 1, 1974, or if the unit (unless it's a mobile home pad) was first rented after Jan. 1, 1974, you're not protected by the 7 per cent rule.

The exception also covers a duplex when the one side is occupied by the landlord.

Also excluded from the rule are all bachelor, studio and one-bedroom units renting for more than $300 a month; all two-bedroom units going for more than $350 a month and all units with three or more bedrooms renting for more than $400.

Also exempted from the 7 per cent ceiling are premises owned and operated by a non-profit society or a university or other educational institution.

If a tenant feels a rent increase is excessive, he or she can appeal to the Rent Review Commission. At the same time, however, they must suggest what they feel is a reasonable rent.

The Rent Review Commission will not select a figure in the middle. It will select one or the other, or reject them both and ask the two parties to try again.

A landlord can only raise the rent once a year though he doesn't have to and he must give three months notice of the increase, using a form available from the Rent Review Commission or the Rentalsman office.

A tenant, on the other hand, must give a landlord a month's notice of intention to vacate.

Woman dies in plunge from downtown carpark

Victoria police have identified a woman who plunged to her death from a downtown building Thursday afternoon.

The woman, whose name is being withheld, was the third person to die in a fall in the city in the past two days.

A police spokesman said the woman, who was in her mid 20s, was killed instantly after falling 60 feet from the top of the View Street parkade on to the roof of the Eaton's warehouse on View.

An employee working inside the store heard the thud and went out and discovered the body at about 1:30 p.m.

Foul play is not suspected.

Police also released the names of two elderly persons killed when they fell from buildings earlier Thursday and Wednesday.

The body of Elizabeth Constance Mitchell, 73, of 1202-360 Douglas, was found by a passerby at 6:30 a.m. Thursday outside the highrise apartment building where she lived.

And police identified John Pascoe, 90, as the man whose body was found at 5:30 a.m. Wednesday on the parking lot outside the James Bay Lodge, 336 Simcoe.

Pascoe apparently fell from a third-storey window.

BRAMLEY
. . . $52,500 by July

Thump!

A minor earthquake shook southern Vancouver Island at 8:02 a.m. today but did little more than rattle windows.

Dieter Weichert of the Pacific Geoscience Centre at Patricia Bay, who said he felt a "thump," reported the quake approached 4 on the Richter scale.

It was centred in the Bamfield-Barkley Sound area, an area where minor quakes have occurred from time to time, he said.

$3,000 raise for manager

Victoria city manager Jim Bramley was awarded a $3,000 raise by city council Thursday night after a one-hour in-camera session.

Mayor Mike Young said aldermen differed on the amount the manager should get. Some members of council, reportedly led by the mayor, held out for $5,000.

Two others, Ald. Larry Ryan, who is secretary of the labor council, and Ald. Robin Blencoe, voted when council sat as personnel committee against any pay raise because it comes in the middle of a city union contract period, but they were outnumbered 7-2.

The vote on the motion that the committee rise and report was unanimous, however, according to a participant.

Bramley's present salary is $49,428 a year, which includes the 7¼-per-cent pay raise negotiated for Canadian Union of Public Employees members at city hall earlier this year and also passed through to non-union staff.

When the raise takes effect next July 1, he will be making $52,500.

The stated reason for the salary boost is to bring Bramley back into line with other city managers with similar duties and responsibilities and above other senior city hall staff. He had been falling behind other city managers recently.

Jim Walker, president of the CUPE outside workers local, hung around the council chambers until the secret session broke up at 11 p.m.

He said the raise establishes a precedent for reopening wage negotiations which the union will also try to use.

In every job reclassification at city hall, CUPE will push for upward pay revisions as well. Parity is now an issue in wage bargaining in Victoria, said Walker, referring to the long-standing demand of some city hall unions for the same pay received by civic workers on the Lower Mainland.

Musical traffic signals for blind?

Victoria's blind came to city council with guide dogs and white canes Thursday night to press for street lights that make noise as well as change from green to amber to red.

A brief prepared by the Canadian Council of the Blind Out of Sight Club calls for audible signals to assist the blind at six key intersections — on Douglas at Superior, Belleville and Yates, Oak Bay junction, Hillside and Blanshard, and by the Battin-Fielding handicapped housing project near Saanich municipal hall.

There are now two audible signals, one to allow blind persons to cross Blanshard at Fisgard to get to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind office and a second on Esquimalt Road. They emit a high-pitched tone when it is safe to cross, but they only permit the crossing of Blanshard and Esquimalt, not the intersecting streets.

Del Graham, who presented the brief to council, said one blind Victorian has worked out his own method to cross Fisgard. He counts to 32 after the tone stops, then he knows the walk light is on for Fisgard pedestrians. But someone else measuring off the same number might count slower or faster and step off the curb into traffic.

The audible signals cost $250 for a Canadian-made version, with a Japanese one available at about half the price that cheeps or caws like a bird and also can play music.

Such signals would also benefit people who have good vision. The brief said "an audible traffic signal provides a stimulus that is more emphatic than a visual signal and is less prone to be overlooked."

Mrs. Graham asked the aldermen to imagine what it is like for a blind person having to cross a busy street.

"Before crossing the street, stand on the corner, close your eyes or blindfold yourself. Then consider seriously whether you feel secure enough to negotiate the crosswalk.

"Every day people must cross the street without seeing."

Mayor Mike Young told the group the city had investigated audible signals several years ago but that they were found to be unreliable. Newer ones are on the market now that appear easy to maintain, he said.

The brief said Winnipeg has had little trouble with its one audible signal on Portage Avenue since it was first put up in 1953. That one sounds a buzzer and a bell when north and southbound traffic has stopped.

Council was sympathetic to the blind delegation's request and referred to council's traffic subcommittee for detailed consideration at its next meeting.

Hopes for Royal lie with province

First of two parts

audrey johnson

The decades-long debate on an arts centre-concert hall for Victoria may now be mere months from resolution.

If the tri-council approved-in-principle recommendations for the Royal Theatre get enough money from the province, phase one will be in sight.

Approval in principle is all the Royal Theatre Committee is looking for as the first step. The group is chaired by Victoria alderman Ron McKenzie with Saanich alderman Howard Sturrock and former Oak Bay alderman John Goult representing the two-thirds-owner municipalities.

A commitment by the province is the next critical move in a sequence that will give Southern Vancouver Island what every other capital region in Canada has had for years.

No money will be sought at the local level until the provincial government confirms its intention of providing a most of the proposed cost $2.3 million cost.

So while we wait for Provincial Secretary and Minister of Government Services Hugh Curtis to speak for the government, it's worth taking a close look at the proposal; the people who brought the debate to this point — and some reaction, pro and con.

Note: For this discussion reference to Victoria is not a reference to the central city core but to the entire area in its widest connotation — a concept for the general good but which some seem to have trouble understanding. Would they — certain Saanich council members among them — like to see the borders closed at 8 p.m. and a curfew established to keep Saanich residents at home nights?

The truth is that more outlying residents flock to the downtown theatres and auditoriums as Victorians.

This Victoria — the capital region — is pinpointed as the most rapidly growing culture and entertainment-hungry city in Western Canada and perhaps Canada.

Audiences grow steadily for a wide range of entertainment with high ticket costs no obstacle.

Attractions such as operatic luminary Pavarotti in recital, Broadway musicals like Ain't Misbehavin', or China's exotic Peking Opera, have no trouble selling out with ticket tops ranging from $13.50 to $25.

There is no indication that this region has need for a theatre with a seating capacity in excess of 2,000 persons.

There was a time when I was in tune with those agitating for civic commitment to a multi-functional modern arts building. From certain points of view this would still be a preferred solution. But in the face of costs that soar with every breath one draws, only the impractical would give it consideration.

Renovations to the Royal would provide 1,500 to 1,700 seats, up from the present 1,455.

It is difficult, says the report prepared for the Royal Theatre Committee by Allan M. Purdy, to offer a convincing argument that the Royal capacity is inadequate; that for the sake of up to a further 500 seats, the existing facility should be torn down to construct at at a cost of between 10 and 15 million dollars, a 2,000 - 2,200-seat modern multi-functional arts building.

"There are a number of ways in which a well-managed well- equipped and attractive concert hall with 1,500 seat capacity can attract productions which, under normal circumstances, might balk at the economic potential," states the report.
which outlines at least one of these ways.

Ald. McKenzie, who initiated the report, and Allan Purdy, who was authorized to prepare it, are successful Victoria business men who are also sensitive to, and dedicated to the quality of life in this area.

They apply both practicality and vision in teamwork which has demonstrably resulted in great benefits to a large and growing number of citizens. It was McKenzie who first saw the practical value of Purdy's plan for operation of the McPherson Playhouse as a small, viable arts centre under a citizen-management group. He suggested a brief on the subject and steered it through the phases of civic acceptance until it became a fact.

As the Purdy brief promised, within six months of the McPherson Playhouse Foundation taking over management the consistent annual deficit of around $55,000 had been eliminated and now, two-and-a-half years later, the operation carries on with a modest surplus — about $20,000 accumulated to date.

In the year before Foundation management began, 374 events drew a total attendance of 155,000. This past year under the foundation saw 675 events with attendance of more than a quarter million — more than the entire population of metro Victoria.

Max Wyman in the Vancouver Sun, called it "One of the most intriguing developments on the Victoria scene in years."

McKenzie's recognition of Purdy's qualifications — a theatre manager in England before emigrating to Canada; a 20-year resident of Victoria combining intense activity in the arts-entertainment field with a reputation as one of the most knowledgable and accurate insurance adjusters in western Canada — have led him to solid support for a report that makes fascinating and convincing reading.

Next Friday: An analysis of the Purdy report.

Dear Mike: Our 1966 Thunderbird has been in storage these past 16 months, and its engine is "frozen." The engine won't turn over at all with the starter. Is there a cheap, easy way to get the engine loose? — Stuck

Dear Stuck: Yes. The time-honored unsticker trick is to remove all the sparkplugs and squirt in either straight brake fluid or a 50/50 mix of kerosene and lightweight oil. You won't need much lubricant, but use a pump-type oil can and squirt the fluid all around the cylinder bore. You can also use an aerosol like WD-40. About ¾ jigger is all you'll need. Let the engine stand for a day or two so the lubricant can penetrate. Then try turning the engine over. It's best to use a hand crank, but on your T-Bird you'll have to hit the starter in short bursts.

Dear Mike: If my 1976 Chevy hasn't been started in 3-4 days the battery goes dead. I then have to use jumper cables. The battery, alternator, and regulator all check out okay. I've been disconnecting the ground cable, and this solves the problem. When I first take the cable loose, there's no spark at the post. But when I reconnect the cable two or three days later, there is a spark. What gives?— Grounded

Dear Grounded: Check your clock. I suspect that your problem is a combination of a marginal battery and current draw to the clock, whose reset mechanism might take more amps than normal. Now I know that sounds bizarre, because a clock doesn't take much current ever, but if a battery is on its last leg, it might check out all right and still run down from a very small, steady draw.

Dear Mike: Our 1973 Chrysler has been making a dry, rubbing, rasping noise in the front end for about a month now. The sound is getting louder. It happens when we hit a bump and also when we put on the brakes fairly hard. Can you suggest a cause and cure?—Raspberry.

Dear Raspberry: Two possibilities: 1) Your torsion-bar anchors might need lubrication or be loose; 2) bad engine mounts can let the fan touch the radiator.

Feel free to send your automotive problems to Wheels, Michael Lamm, Box 7607-B, Stockton, Calif. 95207.

Rolls raffle aids researchers

What's the best buy in lottery tickets? Loto Canada? The Provincial? Loto Quebec? The Western? None of the above.

Here's a lottery that's probably not familiar to you. It's the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation second annual Rolls Royce Raffle.

The tickets are expensive ($100) each, but I still count it as the best buy, for two reasons. First, the odds are great. Only 2,400 tickets are sold, and there are three major prizes. That means one change in 800 to win.

First prize is a 1979 Rolls Royce (or $60,000 tax free), followed by a second prize of a 1980 Corvette (or $10,000), then third prize of a 1980 Camaro Z28 (or $7,000).

The second reason this is the best lottery buy is the most important. The proceeds will be used to aid researchers seeking a cure for juvenile diabetes.

Don't let the name fool you. Juvenile diabetes isn't found only in kids. It's the name scientists give the most serious kind of diabetes. It strikes mostly children, but can strike anyone at any age. It means regular injections of insulin.

It can also mean blindness, hypertension, strokes, arteriosclerosis, kidney failure, and premature aging.

You see, insulin isn't a cure for diabetes, it just controls the disease. Only heart disease and cancer claim more victims. Children who develop juvenile diabetes are at even greater risk. Presently one-half die from kidney disease within 25 years following diagnosis.

The Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation raises funds which are then pooled with American proceeds and granted to researchers in both countries. Canadian research has been supported in Toronto, Montreal, London, Edmonton, and Sherbrooke, Quebec.

Some scientists have already devised a method of producing human insulin using recombinant DNA techniques. At present, diabetics rely on beef and pork insulin, which isn't completely compatible.

Many laboratories have developed techniques for islet transplants in animals. That's the part of the pancreas that produces insulin. More research is needed to perfect this technique for humans.

Toronto researchers Drs. Albisser and Leibel have developed an artificial pancreas that is computer controlled. At Yale, Dr. Philip Felig has built a miniature, battery-operated version.

If you want to buy a ticket for this year's draw, make a contribution or just get information, write to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, 2335 Jane Street, Suite 100, Downsview, Ontario M3M 1A7.

For each $100 ticket you will receive an income tax receipt for $55. If you purchase a ticket, please send two cheques — one for $45, and one for $55, to satisfy government regulations.

If you know of a child who has diabetes, you might be interested in this useful toy. It is a doll called Sugar Babe — and it's designed to teach diabetic children how to give themselves injections. It was designed by a New Jersey woman who is herself a diabetic, and sells for about $35 U.S.

The doll has injection sites marked on the "skin", and comes with a book of instructions. It is appropriate for kids three to twelve years old.

Dolly Parton got a highway named for her in Tennessee, so why shouldn't Sophia Loren follow suit? She will if Toronto alderman John Nunziata has his way. He's campaigning to name a new 16-lane highway extension the "Via Sophia" — says that would be "properly sensual and romantic." Toronto has the largest Italian population of any city outside Italy.

Beggerman, Thief by Irwin Shaw was on the best-seller list at the Baltimore County Jail because of its hidden message — two hacksaw blades. They were used in a recent escape of six prisoners. Sheriff Charles Hickey said the escape of six prisoners was engineered with the help of an outsider who put the cutting blades in the book.

Edsel Ford II

At birth, Mignon Faulkner weighed just 17 ounces — little more than a loaf of bread. Now the tiny baby, believed to be most prematurely born baby to survive, is a year old and going home for the first time. Friends, relatives and hospital staff members jammed a lounge at Children's Hospital and Health Centre in San Diego for a farewell party. The tot has grown to about 22 inches from about 10, and her weight has climbed to 10 lbs.

Edsel Ford II, the 29-year-old great-grandson of Henry Ford, is bored with speculation on whether he eventually will take over as chairman of Ford Motor Co. "I mean, I don't know," he said. "Who knows? It's not up to me to decide anyway." His father, Henry Ford II, has stepped aside as chief executive officer but remains chairman.

While the Boston Pops hunts for a successor to the late Arthur Fiedler, the pianist Peter Nero is intent on giving it some serious competition. A new orchestra, the Philly Pops, has been created in Philadelphia, with Nero as its director. And as though to underscore the potential for rivalry, it has chosen for its first performance later this month a George Gershwin program that duplicates Fiedler's last Philadelphia concert six years ago.

Kathleen Kennedy Townsend — the oldest child of the late Robert Kennedy — has been campaigning in Connecticut to have midwives licensed, and she'd planned to call one in for the birth last week of her second daughter but "it was a very short labor" so the task of conducting the home delivery fell to husband David.

abby

Dear Abby:

My husband recently had a birthday. His ex-wife and children invited him over for dinner and a birthday celebration. I was excluded. He accepted and I was left alone for the evening.

I believe that what he did was inconsiderate and unfair to me. He could have invited his children over to celebrate his birthday with us, or arranged to do something with them at another time.

What do you think?

Hurt

Dear Hurt:

I don't blame you for feeling hurt. Next year start early to plan a special birthday celebration for your husband. Awkward situations such as this almost always arise when a woman marries a divorced man with a 'first family.'

Dear Abby:

Eight years ago I married a fine man. (Second marriage for both of us.) His best friend is a mortician (married) who keeps making passes at me. Whenever we are together in a group, he manages to ask me quietly if I will meet him somewhere. I have told him repeatedly I'm not interested in anything like that, but he persists.

I have never mentioned this to my husband because so far it's harmless.

Abby, the thought that drives me up a wall is this: when I die, I know my husband will call on this mortician to do the 'honors' (as he did with his first wife), and I cannot bear the thought of it!

This situation does have its humorous aspects, but nevertheless it is disturbing to me. If I were 22 and in perfect health maybe I wouldn't feel so panicky.

I am going to arrange my funeral with another undertaker, but what do I tell my husband?

Serious

Dear Serious:

Don't tell your husband anything. Simply leave instructions with your lawyer, physician, clergyman and a few close relatives. You may outlive your husband and the mortician. Or decide on immediate cremation. That way the mortician wouldn't get to lay a hand on you, dead or alive.

Dear Abby:

Soft Touch, the mother who couldn't get her grown children to repay the money they borrowed from her, should have given them 'soft terms.' That's what we did.

When our two married sons needed grubstakes to buy homes, Dad and I gave them longer terms at lower interest than any professional lender would have given a couple of penniless kids.

We made them sign IOU notes, telling them that their notes were part of our estate, so that other heirs would not be cheated in case of our unexpected deaths.

Their payments to us are small — but regular. We feel that this is as important a part of their character training as their Boy Scout days were.

Opera classic here

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Two great romantic stars of the silent films have the lead roles in one of the all-time classics of the era, La Boheme, which is being screened at McPherson Playhouse, Monday at 7 p.m.

The film is based on a famous story of life and love in the Latin Quarter of Paris in the 1830s. Puccini used this story as the libretto of his great opera which bears the same title. In the 1926 screen version of the story, directed by King Vidor, Lillian Gish plays Mimi and the dashing John Gilbert, Rudolfo.

Introduction of the film and piano accompaniment will be by the distinguished film historian, Charles Hofmann. He will be playing his own musical score which he arranged for Miss Gish.

McPherson Playhouse Foundation is presenting the film as a benefit for the forthcoming spring production of the Puccini opera by the Pacific Opera Association. All profits are being donated to the Association.

Hard on the heels of the Peking Opera at the Royal Theatre, comes a troupe from Soviet Russia. The Mini-Bolshoi comes for two nights, Wednesday and Thursday.

It's a company made up of 15 dancers chosen from Russia's most famous classical ballet companies. Bolshoi trained for the tour, two members of the troupe are from the Bolshoi company, two are from the Kiev Ballet and the others are artist members of the State Academic Ballet Theatre in Odessa which is described as the "Royal Winnipeg" of the Soviet Union by some critics.

The troupe will represent the first occasion upon which a Russian mini ballet tour of North America has been undertaken.

The two Victoria performances will be entirely different from each other. The Wednesday program, dedicated as a Tchaikowsky memorial, will include excerpts from Swan Lake, Romeo and Juliet (especially choreographed for the tour) and Sleeping Beauty.

Under the title, Bolshoi Divertissement, parts of Giselle, and Spring Waters and the famous Pavlova piece, Dying Swan, as well as three characteristic Russian dances, will be presented.

The early music concerts which are one aspect of the faculty series presented by Victoria Conservatory of Music, offer the second event featuring La Confrerie St.Julien at Craigdarroch Castle, Friday.

The program concentrates on music of the German baroque and rococo with works by J.S. Bach (a violoncello suite), C.P.E. Bach, Benda and Graun families and Johann Hasse.

Members of La Confrerie St.Julien are Sydney Humprheys, violin, James Hunter, cello, Kelly Charlton, harpsichord, and James Kennedy, recorder and baroque flute. Vocalists are sopranos Mary Copland, Selena James and Pierann Moon and tenors Rory Hammond and Richard Margison.

Concert time is 8 p.m.

Staying in bed all day?

By ENID NEMY
New York Times

So it isn't everyone's idea of heaven. Still, for a lot of busy people, it's an awfully nice way to spend the day. Let those who will jog, cycle or roller skate in the park, window-shop the avenue, do the museums, drive to the country. The sybaritic, some say the smart, stay in bed.

"I'm highly disciplined and when I stay in bed all day on a Sunday, I have the feeling I'm playing hooky, but my conscience doesn't hurt me much or long," said Melanie Kahane.

Miss Kahane, the president of the interior design concern of Melanie Kahane Associates, spends a weekend day in bed whenever she can, and she couldn't care less whether it's sunny, raining or snowing outside.

"It's like a religion and I'm devoted to it," Miss Kahane said. "Anyone who disagrees is a heretic."

If the housekeeper is working, breakfast and lunch are brought up to her; if she's alone, she goes down, makes her own meals and brings them up herself. But the eating is done in bed, propped up on Porthault bed linen ("my one fierce extravagance") with lots of pillows, and surrounded by more books and papers than she can possibly get through, a telephone and directory, paper for notes and lists, some work and the television set

"I'm like a child with all my toys around me," she said. "The next morning, I feel divine, and wish it was Sunday again."

Marian Logan describes herself as a "hyper person, coiled like a spring."

"The only way I can unwind is to pamper myself and make me feel a little special," said Mrs. Logan, a special assistant to the state commissioner of transportation, and former commissioner of human rights for New York City. The pampering consists of spending a day a week in bed, when she can.

Mrs. Logan begins with a bubble bath, lights the fireplace in her bedroom, reads, listens to music, watches ball games, and indulges in her pet extravagance — "a glass or two of bubbly."

If her 16-year-old son is at home, he'll bring up one of his special cheeseburgers or English muffins. If he's out, she carries up cottage cheese and fruit.

For Bernice Malamud, an assistant vice president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, a day in bed, possible only when the family is out of the apartment or out of town, is a "falling away."

"Sometimes I don't even know I'm going to do it," she said. "Usually it's a good book that lures me back to bed, and then I have to tell myself how exhausted I am, and that I deserve it."

Even then, she does't actually plan to spend the whole day in bed. She gets up, takes a bath, puts on another nightgown, and returns to bed to read, nap and drink tea.

"It's only at the end of the day that I realize I've spent it in bed but by then I don't feel guilty, I feel marvelous," she said.

Bobbe Munves, the president of James II, a subsidiary of James Robinson, the antique silver concern, spends six days a week at business, and, when it's possible, her husband encourages her to stay in bed on Sundays.

"I have breakfast in bed, read the paper, read all the magazines I've saved, watch television news or a movie, and have a wonderful time," she said. "I also read serious books that I think I should read. I must be a sick person because actually I'd like to read junky books but I have this thing about only reading junk on trips."

There are purists who think that Mrs. Munves is not a true-blue stayer-in-bed because she admits to an occasional twinge of conscience during the day. When that happens, she gets up, cleans a closet and goes back to bed.

Anita Tiburzi remembers when she could spend a Saturday or Sunday in bed whenever she wished. Now, with a 3½-year-old son, she stays in bed only when he's visiting his grandparents in Florida.

"My whole bedroom is set up for such days," she said. "I have a stereo, telephone, television and bookcases within reach."

The morning begins with orange juice, a croissant, sweet butter and cafe au lait and progresses to the newspaper, books, music and old movies.

"Somewhere in between," she said, "I do all that good stuff like milk pads on my eyes, giving myself a manicure, and aside from breakfast, fasting."

The fasting is accomplished with the help of a 23-ounce bottle of Perrier, placed beside the bed and "swigged down, at room temperature, right out of the bottle." Miss Tiburzi characterized swigging from the bottle as "too gauche," but as director of corporate communications for Perrier, she's sensitive to such things.

Mystery fever hard to track down

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I've been running a fever for more than four months. I take my temperature three or four times a day. Sometimes it is normal, then it may go up to 101 degrees. When it is low I feel good and can be active around the house. When it goes up I feel weak and just want to stay in bed. All kinds of tests have been done. No one knows the right answer. Any light you can shed will be appreciated.

Miss A. deB.

Dear Miss deB.:

Tracking down fever of unknown origin is one of the most difficult problems in medicine. There are few more frustrating experiences for the doctor... and for the patient.

When doctors are first confronted with such a baffling problem, they tabulate all the possibilities and then proceed to rule out each one by detailed and complicated studies. Skillful applications of all diagnostic procedures are combined with thorough physical examination and elaborate laboratory tests in order to detect and uncover the fundamental cause.

Infections are always prominent in the list of causes. For it is well-known that fever is one of the body's indicators of its reaction to invading bacteria and viruses.

Other conditions are considered. Tumors, benign and malignant, tuberculosis, typhoid and typhus fever, amoebic dysentery, rheumatic fever, allergies, rheumatoid arthritis, liver disease, malaria and vascular diseases are but some of the long list of possibilities. This list is not meant to frighten you, nor to create unnecessary anxiety. It is meant to indicate how necessary is complete cooperation between the patient and the doctor.

There are now many remarkable, sophisticated tests which are used in diagnostic evaluation. Some of them are so new that doctors utilize the talents of other physicians all over the country.

Dear Doctor:

What kind of exercise would be helpful after surgery for a crushed disc?

Ms. U.McK.

Dear Ms. McK.:

I am intrigued that you should ask me to recommend exercises after such an important operation. Of course, I will not do so because it would only be a threat to your recovery. Neither I nor your friends or relatives are in a position to suggest an ideal and safe form of exercise. It is beyond my belief that you have not seriously pursued this matter with your surgeon and with the experts in rehabilitation that are available in your local community.

"200 miles to the gallon!"

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I have problems in making friends and the reason behind this is that I am shy. I just recently broke up with my girlfriend because we could not communicate. I was too shy, so we couldn't talk much to each other.

I want so much to be part of the group and I don't want to have to lose friendships because of this one obstacle. If I could get in with more people it would make things better for me. But I can't if I don't gain my independence. How can I make myself more known and let people know I'm alive?

Answer: You have not given your age, but I am going to assume that you are past the mid-teens. Shyness is often present in people well into their 20s. You are right that you need to show your independence by overcoming shyness.

I suggest that you look into programs available at the YMCA or YMHA that involve group work. There are many of these offered, and even if you phone one of these organizations and ask if they have courses or groups to help people become more sociable you will probably get an idea of what's available. The advantage of a group such as this is that the other people in it often have the same difficulties, and you can help each other overcome shyness.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I am writing in regards to my breasts. I am 15 years of age. You see, my breasts are uneven — my left breast is much larger than my right. I am sure that many other teenage girls have the same trouble but it really bothers me a lot because I cannot wear T-shirts, halters, or any other tight clothing because of this. Will it even out when I am older or is there any possible thing that I can do now to even it?

Answer: Very few people are completely symmetrical and often one side is larger than the other. This happens not only to breasts but feet and hands as well. When there is a noticeable difference in the size it is awkward to get clothes to fit properly.

If the difference in size of your breasts is very noticeable it is possible to have the larger reduced to be more like the smaller breast.

This operation to reduce the size of the breast is performed by a plastic surgeon. The results are excellent.

If you are finding this difference in the size of your breasts to be uncomfortable or a source of embarrassment you could talk to your family doctor about referring you to a plastic surgeon.

In the meantime, you will find that wearing a bra which may be padded on one side will even you up temporarily.

Dear Dr. Vichert:

I have heard of student allowances. Each person I have talked to tells me something different. I would like to know more about it. I'm talking about the allowance after you leave home, but still wish to continue school. Who do I go to talk to? And, how old do you have to be to be eligible?

Answer: In order to find out about financial support should you leave home and want to continue in school, I would suggest that you contact your local social assistance office.

For help in planning leaving home if you are a minor, you may find it useful to talk over your plans with a social worker at the Children's Aid Society. Ideally, the best place to finish school is in your own home. The fact that you are thinking of leaving would suggest to me that you are not completely happy at home.

As you probably realize, leaving home is not a simple matter and there is a lot of information you would need.

I would suggest you discuss your plans with a worker from the Children's Aid, or a youth counselling service.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I am a 15-year-old girl with a very big problem. My parents couldn't give a damn about me (not that I care) until the neighbors started asking them why and where I go and what I do.

I hang around with a lot of guys who are on parole. My friends and I have changed them for the better and they now get along and communicate with their families.

Tonight I asked if I could eat over at my girlfriend's house because she's sick and there's no one to watch her. My "mother" refused and said I had to stay in. But I cleaned up my room and she said I could go. Just as I was leaving, she called me back and said I couldn't go. I've put up with her long enough and I told her this. She said if I walked out the door I better not return.

I've thought of suicide, but my friend watches me now. I've seen the school nurse, school social worker and Children's Aid people. They didn't help at all. I'm desperate and don't really know what to do.

Answer: Yours is a complex problem which I am going to answer very simply — Get help! You might respond by arguing that "I already have, Mr. Know-It-All!" and you are justified, of course, in feeling frustrated and discouraged. But as I said, the complexity of your situation will make the solution difficult.

Your parents sound bitter and mistrustful of you. Why? Have you ever given them cause for this? Have you spoken to your mother and father about getting help together? These and others are vital questions which must be answered in order to help you.

Since you are so desperate, and your initial pleas of help have fallen on deaf ears I am not going to recommend that you go through the same channels again. I would speak to a professional psychotherapist who works with adolescents and families. You can reach one through a hospital adolescent clinic, or a teen drop-in centre.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6233.

Movie within a serial is a TV first

By JOHN GOUDAS

With the daytime ratings battle raging fiercely, soaps are pulling all the stops to win over new viewers. Lately, that means experimenting with unusual projects.

Edge of Night has undertaken a novel approach, and an ambitious one at that.

The producers have come up with a script of a Gothic romance entitled Mansion of the Damned, and are producing it within the storyline of Edge. The production of a movie within a serial marks a first for daytime TV.

As the story goes, Hollywood producer Owen Madison, played by Bruce Gray, is producing the film at the request of his wife Nola (an ex-film queen turned alcoholic), played by Kim Hunter. But some frightening events occur and many feel that the film itself is cursed.

Hunter, who won an Academy Award for her performance in A Streetcar Named Desire, plays Hester Atherton, a lonely aging spinster who transforms herself into a witch, in the movie within the soap.

In addition to the long hours spent on the Edge of Night set, Hunter and Margaret Colin (Paige Madison on the soap) trekked, after hours, to the Eaves Costume Co., for fittings of their Victorian-era dresses. From the combined talents of Edge of Night costume designer, Doreen Ackerman, and the Eaves's Co. draper, E. Oliver Olsen, Hunter's Hester was stunningly outfitted in a floor length, red velvet dress complete with bustle. As the witch, her dress looks like a black ball gown from Gone With the Wind. When asked if it were difficult maneuvering with all the underpinnings, quilted petticoat, and bustles, Hunter remarked, "One finds that one has to stick one's derriere out to balance."

Hunter was then put in the hands of Edge's father-son make-up team of Andy and Dennis Eger. Preparing for her witch role, Hunter arrived at 5:30 a.m. for a make-up procedure that wasn't completed until 10:00 a.m. The actress was fitted with a latex mask acting as a second layer of skin. (Fans will recall Hunter wore an ape mask in the Planet of the Apes movie series.) Her day, which started at 5:30 a.m., didn't end till 10 o'clock that night.

"I doubt if this will become a trend of soaps," says Hunter. "It's simply much too awesome an endeavor."

Whether Mansion of the Damned, will give Edge an edge in the ratings game is yet to be determined. In any case, Kim Hunter's total professionalism made the enormous project easier for all.

Channel Chatter: Lenore Kasdorf (Rita Bauer on Guiding Light) is pregnant not only on the popular soap but in real life. Lenore and her husband, actor Phil Peters, are expecting their first child in February . . .

Cynthia Bostick, sensual villainess Marcia Campbell in As the World Turns, returned to her roots in Qwensborough, Ky., recently to be honored as one of the top-three alumni of the local high school.

WATERCOLORS

Since his last art showing at the Provincial Museum (almost 10 years ago) Egoyan did very little in art work. Recently, however, he has started again with a new approach and concept to the subject matter and technical expression. The theme now is "Scenes & Flowers" in watercolor — unlike the previous theme of "Birds" in oil painting. The new work is totally original and everyone is cordially invited to see the display at

Kids miss politics

By CONWAY DALY

WINNIPEG (CP) — The school system in Canada is saturated with political issues, but formal teaching for students about politics is extremely unrealistic, a conference on children and society was told.

Ken Osborne, a professor of education at the University of Manitoba, said the school system is political in the sense that it aims to produce a certain type of youth who will fit, without too much grating, into the social order.

He said the text books used in schools usually stress national government and institutions, while giving scant attention to local or volutary organizations. The only political activity emphasized is voting.

The text books also stress consensus in reaching decisions and ignore the elements of conflict — lobbies, pressure groups and differing interests — that in fact mean success or failure for many political projects.

Speaking at a conference organized by the University of Winnipeg to mark 1979 as The International Year of the Child, Osborne said a U.S. study found the major message given in school civics courses is to obey authority.

The professor, who taught for 11 years in the Winnipeg school system, said children at an early age can grasp certain basic political concepts, such as authority, fairness and power, but their focus changes over the years.

A 12-year-old tends to consider issues strictly in terms of individuals, he said, but by the age of 16 a youth can understand such ideas as the common good of society. In the same period, youths usually become less authoritarian in their views on crime and punishment.

Osborne said youngsters could learn about political reality by knocking on doors for local candidates or getting involved in social projects that serve a genuine community need. But he said the school's organizational needs get in the way of innovations, and teachers become discouraged.

"It's like running against an escalator," said Osborne, who added that teachers — working in isolation from each other and caught up in the day-to-day routine — often are naive about the political role they play in society.

"Most teachers themselves are not political people."

CLUES ACROSS

4. SHACK not shock. A SHACK is so primitive that there may indeed be "no electricity" (this phrasing links up especially well with the question of power supply). A shock simply is, or is not, an electric one.
7. WEATHER not leather. If it isn't reasonably durable, it isn't good leather.
9. GARTERS not gaiters. For their purpose, GARTERS need to be reasonably tight (but not "too tight"). There is little reason for gaiters to be at all "tight."
10. TRICK not truck. Aptly, a TRICK may be of the kind categorized as dirty. Although a truck may happen to be dirty, it is not really the case that it may, of course, be "a dirty one" (This phrase being better suited to something that is inherently dirty, or understood to be of the dirty kind).
13. DIE not lie. He will probably not wish to "DIE in bed" (this implying tedious sickness and decline, etc.), but he will want to lie in bed sometimes.
14. RATE not hate. Why should his being a serious rival cause you to hate him as such? In any event, hatred is more than merely a matter of not being particularly inclined to want to see the person do well.
15. FELL not felt. The clue has the air of referring to a very special and personal situation. However, it would be normal that a sympathetic nurse "felt for" the sufferer to some extent.
22. GRAPES not graphs. Some GRAPES are more useful for eating, others for wine or some other purpose. Generally, graphs are designed for specific purposes; it's not a question of greater usefulness or suitability.
24. BLARE not glare. If, as may very well be, her attention is on the spilt soup, she is not likely to be directly aware of being glared at. In any case, why imagine that an affronted diner will simply glare in silence? BLARE is the more convincing case.
25. FRILLS not trills. Taking the clue simply as it stands, it is natural to interpret "ornamental" in the ordinary sense of visually decorative, as FRILLS, and there is no outstanding reason to relate the clue to musical trills.

CLUES DOWN

1. DEPRIVED not depraved. The idea of sinking into poor circumstances (as opposed to, say, actively descending to depths of baseness) links up more suitably with DEPRIVED than depraved.
2. STOCK not stack or stick. The sort of quantity that is "stored" under considered "conditions" is essentially a STOCK, rather than a single stick, whether or not in the form of a stack.
6. 6. CURSING not curbing. "CURSING" aptly reflects frustration, etc., as arising from inability to fight a thing off. On the other hand, it could be that a man merely curbing his drinking doesn't want to give it up.
11. PAST not fast. A keen athlete is constantly measuring his performance or progress, so that he is not left to "realize" that he is fast improving. At a certain time, it may dawn on him that he is PAST improving.
12. PET not vet. If the vet is not much or often used, it may seem reasonable enough to fail to recall his name at some time.
18. GASSED not gashed. "GASSED" is entirely apt, but the clue calls for wounded rather than "gashed." Also, mere wounds are hardly a natural assessment of the outcome of an attack, whereas the object of gas attacks was that men should be GASSED.
20. BADLY not sadly. Since any degree of discouragement could possibly be viewed as sad, it is more essentially really BAD discouragement that will drive actors to extremes as suggested.

Tippling benefits qualified

CHICAGO (UPI) — A martini a day could keep the doctor away and reduce the risk of death from heart attack, Harvard University researchers say.

Teetotalers may argue virtue is on their side, but tippling has the endorsement of medical science. Researchers report that drinkers are less likely to die of heart attacks than non-drinkers.

The report appears in the Nov. 2 Journal of the American Medical Association, released along with an editorial cautioning that, with 17 million alcoholics in the nation, tippling is not advisable for everyone.

A Harvard Medical School research team headed by Dr. Charles H. Hennekens reported alcohol from beer, wine or hard liquor — taken in moderation — provides protection against heart attack.

"Data indicate that the lowered risk of coronary death among light to moderate drinkers (2 oz. or less of alcohol daily) ... is remarkably similar for beer, wine and liquor after adjusting for the different alcohol content of each of these types of beverage," the report said.

"Thus, it seems probable that a protective effect in coronary disease is actually due to alcohol itself rather than any other substances found in each type of drink."

But, they warned, "High alcohol intake has been shown to cause an increase in fatal arrhythmias (irregularities or cessation of heartbeat.)"

The researchers studied 568 married men who died of coronary heart disease and an equal number of matched control subjects.

Further study was needed, they said, to determine how alcohol protects against coronary heart disease. They urged further investigation of the effects of alcohol on lipoprotiens — substances which, depending on density, can either guard against or help induce coronary artery disease that leads to heart attack.

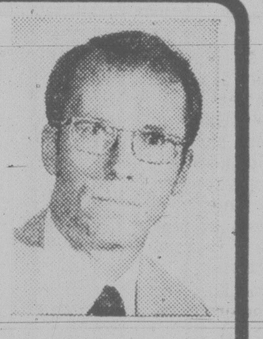
They also called for more study of personality types and their effect on heart disease, noting a relaxed nature among moderate drinkers could help spare them from heart attack while "excessive drive" in both heavy drinkers and non-drinkers may increase their heart attack risk.

An accompanying editorial by Dr. W.F. Castilli of the National Heart Institute was cautious with the martini-a-day news.

"With 17 million alcoholics in this country, perhaps we have a message for which this country is not yet ready," Castilli said.

"Zero intake of alcohol seems less healthful than a moderate intake, but higher intakes of alcohol are associated with increased rates of all the well-known problems that alcohol produces from nutritional, gastrointestinal, neurological, cardiological, hematologic, pulmonary, electrolyte and cancer problems," he said.

"Thus the problem seems simple — just two a day and that's it ..."



Some Thoughts About Heritage Preservation

Victoria's architectural heritage is unique in North America. It slakes a universal thirst for roots and by so doing constitutes a vital element in our economy. It must be preserved.

Present heritage preservation efforts are token, inadequate, and allow the piece-meal destruction of priceless architectural treasures like the Campbell Building and the Alkazar Mansion.

Heritage Preservation Zoning will preserve our architectural heritage by making restoration and rehabilitation the rule rather than the exception in Victoria.

Running into money? Try mink

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Brace yourselves, folks! It looks like we're in for a cardiac-conscious, anti-cholesterol Christmas this year.

Come December 25, the continent's health nuts should find their stockings bulging with more than calf muscles and varicose veins.

The trendy gift catalogues now arriving in the mail simply are loaded with largess for the jock who has everything.

Has a long distance runner on your shopping list quit entering marathon races because he or she doesn't have a thing to wear?

Quel tragique! Grab a Bloomingdale's catalogue this very instant and order the poor baby a mink jogging suit.

Better yet, order two. That way, the jogger can wear one while the other is airing out. You know how soggy mink becomes when saturated with sweat.

Bloomingdale's, of New York and other points, offers jogging suits of "rich, rich mink in navy, white, racy red stripes" for only $10,000 each. For another grand or two, maybe you can pick up a matching mink headband.

Should you have more than one exercise freak to buy for, I recommend acquiring a Christmas catalogue from Sakowitz, the well-known Houston retailer and wordsmith.

Noting that someone once "verbalized a great truism" to the effect that health was "the ultimate gift," Sakowitz devotes its two most prominent catalogue pages to fitness items.

For $127,147.32, you can give a truism verbalizer on your list a genuine "Texas-shaped swimming pool filled with Perrier," the imported sparkling water.

The 32 cents presumably covers the cost of packing and handling.

For $20,000, Sakowitz will see that an apple is "hand delivered" to the health faddist of your choic) "each and every day of the year."

If $20,000 seems a lot of money to keep the doctor away, bear in mind, as the catalog points out, that "1980 is a Leap Year." The extra day in February reduces the unit price of the apples from $54.79 to $54.64 each. So you can see it is quite a bargain.

Nevertheless, I personally was more impressed by a "miniature, lightweight heart rate monitor ... designed to be worn while exercising."

Although $345 certainly is little enough to pay for an ultimate Christmas gift, particularly one that might keep some fitness fanatic from overtaxing his ticker, the biggest selling point is not so much the price as the size.

Judging from the catalog illustration, the heart rate monitor would neatly fit under a mink jogging suit.

Incidentally, the 1979 edition of the famous Neiman-Marcus Christmas catalog seems less strenuous than some of its competitors. It is featuring "his and her dirigibles" at $100,000 the pair.

The health benefits flowing from that type of gift appear minimal ars And I wouldn't be caught dead flying one without a blue mink blimp pilot's uniform.

volunteering

Working people often consider becoming involved in volunter activity but hesitate because they feel they may have difficulty fitting a volunteer job in with their other commitments. Many people are unaware that there are scores of volunteer positions available during evenings and weekends as well as weekday mornings and afternoons. Shift-workers can often find volunteer positions flexible enough to work into their irregular schedules.

Volunteer work need not be time-consuming. Many volunteers are contributing half an hour or an hour of their time once a week.

Working people volunteer for many reasons. They may wish to be involved in an activity completely different from that of their field of employment. Sometimes volunteering can provide an easier transition to another career. The experience gained is valuable to the volunteer personally as well as to future employers. People often find that relationships developed at their jobs are limited to working hours. Volunteers can develop close friendships with fellow volunteers, who share a common interest in the work they do together. Volunteering is a constructive and fulfilling way to spend leisure time and . . . it's fun!

Who needs you right now?

Glendale, a large residential institution for the mentally handicapped, has listed a number of requests with the Volunteer Bureau. Volunteers are needed to help with tutoring, socializing on a one-to-one basis, entertainment and other activities. Positions are available for daytime, evening and weekend volunteer work.

Brownies, Guides, Cubs, Scouts and Junior Forest Wardens are always looking for volunteers to lead and assist with their group activities. People with late afternoons or evenings free might be interested in this opportunity to work with young people.

At NEED-Crisis Line, open seven days a week, volunteers are needed to answer the phones during four-hour shifts in the morning, afternoon and evening, and eight-hour shifts overnight. Volunteers at NEED come from all walks of life and have varying schedules. An intensive screening and training program gives volunteers confidence in their ability to listen to callers.

A 92-year-old man in a central area of town needs a volunteer to come once for a few hours to help him with fall preparation of his garden. He has been able to take care of all his gardening projects, but now needs help with this one. The Volunteer Bureau receives many short- and long-term requests on behalf of people who need individual assistance. These volunteer positions can often be arranged to fit a working person's free time.

A musical theatre society needs board members willing to work actively on publicity, fundraising events, and theatre productions. Members would also attend monthly board meetings which are held in the evening. A recording secretary is also needed to take minutes at the board meetings and to type and distribute them to board members.

A community organization involved in representing the needs and rights of handicapped people is looking for volunteers. The volunteer would become a special friend and advocate to a physically, mentally or emotionally handicapped person. The volunteer's hours would be flexible and could be arranged for days or evenings.

An after-school and evening recreation program for boys and girls aged 7 to 17 years, needs volunteers to help with crafts, sports and one-to-one supervision. Programs are taking place in Victoria, Saanich and the Colwood/Metchosin area.

Hospitals and homes for the elderly throughout Victoria are seeking volunteers to visit their residents on a one-to-one basis or to take part in scheduled activities. Talking, reading the newspaper, feeding, going for a walk or drive — there many simple volunteer jobs which mean a lot to hospital residents and take little time on the part of the volunteer. Daytime,evening and weekend hours can be arranged.

Working people can, and do, enjoy the many rewards of volunteering in their leisure time. To find out more about the positions listed in today's column and about the numerous other opportunities available call the Victoria Volunteer Bureau at 386-2269.

Award shared

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Two third-year students at the National Theatre School in Montreal will share the Leo Ciceri Award for 1979. Louise Dion, a native of Quebec City, is in the school's French acting program. Vancouver-born Sidonie Boll is a graduate of the University of British Columbia. The award was established in 1970 to honor the memory of Ciceri, a renowned actor who was concerned about the training of young actors.

OAK BAY
TRAFFIC SAFETY

Oak Bay's record in providing facilities for its citizens, such as parks, the Recreation and Senior Citizens' centres, and the Library, has been excellent.

In some areas, however, we have been lacking. Many of our citizens walk about Oak Bay by day and night to use these and other facilities. We need safe street crossings for all, but especially we must be mindful of the safety of our children and the elderly. We must light and mark our crosswalks clearly throughout Oak Bay, particularly along Oak Bay Avenue and Cadboro Bay Road.

If elected as your Mayor I will see these things are done.

City youngsters lend an ear to Beethoven

Elementary school children are going to university and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra this week.

By today, more than 3,000 Victoria children in Grades 6 and 7 will have enjoyed an hour's orchestral exposure to Beethoven, opera and the music from Rocky.

For many of them, it's their first exposure to live symphony music.

Under the direction of Glen Fast, assistant conductor of the Vancouver Symphony, the orchestra is giving six concerts at the University Centre auditorium.

There were two performances Wednesday and two more today and Friday.

Wednesday's performances were sponsored by the Musicians' Performing Trust Fund and the auditorium was donated by UVic.

The Grades 6 and 7 pupils in School District 61 — more than 1,000 a day — are being bused to the university for the concerts at 10 and 11:15 a.m.

Another program will be arranged for Grades 4 and 5 early in the new year.

Words will fly at UVic Nov. 17

Some of B.C.'s most articulate students will debate in the annual University Cup Debate Tournament Nov. 17 at the University of Victoria.

The question: Whether the federal government should retain ownership of the economically profitable publicly-owned corporations.

The debates, starting at 10.30 a.m., will be held in C wing of the Clearihue Building.

The public is invited to attend and free refreshments will be served.

The University Cup was donated in 1976 by the Victoria Jaycees to help establish college debating in B.C.

The first two years, the cup was won by UVic debaters. In 1978 it was captured by a UBC. team.

Although UVic and UBC have been the winners in the past, Royal Roads Military College, Malaspina College and the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific have been making a name for themselves in debating.

The debaters will be hosted by the University of Victoria Debate and Speech Society.

Cinderella auditions Sunday

The Four Seasons Musical Theatre will hold auditions from 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday at the School of Theatrical Arts, 1318 Broad.

Gini Lefever, the director of Four Seasons' next children's theatre production, is looking for the most beautiful girl in Victoria to play the lead role in Cinderella.

Naturally she is also looking for the most handsome boy to play Prince Charming who seeks the wearer of the glass slipper, and the three ugliest persons for the wicked stepmother and sisters.

Membership up by 14%

A 14 per cent increase in local membership was reported at the annual meeting of the Victoria branch of the Memorial Society of B.C.

Secretary Joan Bennett said membership now stands at 100,000.

Officers elected at the meeting are:

Ernest Edwards, president; George Stegen, vice-president; Clare Yarwood, treasurer and Catherine Perkins, secretary.

Famed U.S. surgeon here for seminar

Dr. Everett Koop, famed surgeon-in-chief at Philadelphia's Children's Hospital, will be in Victoria today and Saturday on a visit sponsored by the Victoria Pro-Life Society.

Tonight at 8 in the Arbutus Secondary School, at Edgelow and Finnerty, he will show the film Abortion of the Human Race at a meeting that is free and open to the public.

For $7.50 on Saturday people will be able to attend a seminar at the school from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The fee will also cover lunch, to be served at noon.

A discussion on infanticide in North America will follow the showing of the film Slaughter of the Innocents. The film, Abortion of the Human Race, will also be shown. Euthanasia will be discussed after the showing of the film Death by Someone's Choice.

Probably the best-known pediatric surgeon in North America, Koop was the subject of more than 5,000 newspaper and magazine articles in 1974 when he separated Siamese twins flown in from the Dominican Republic.

He made international headlines again in 1975 when he reconstructed the rib cage of a baby born with his heart outside his body.

In 1977 the media flocked to Children's Hospital to hear how Koop had separated another pair of Siamese twins, having had to kill one of the babies to save the other because they shared 1½ hearts.

Koop's concern about the declining value of human life began in 1973 with the United States Supreme Court's decision to legalize abortion. Soon afterwards he began to utilize his gifts as a writer and speaker to warn the public about the danger he saw. In 1976 he wrote The Right to Live; The Right to Die and a year later, The Slide to Auschwitz.

He is now in the middle of a $3 million project, using documentary movies, a book, a record album and seminar lectures to raise public reaction against the taking of human life.

Hollywood's old guard honors Stewart

scott's world

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Hollywood's old guard, diminishing in numbers, paid tribute to Jimmy Stewart this week in a touching testimonial that brought together some of the great names of movie history.

Four of its most brilliant directors — Frank Capra, William Wyler, George Cukor and Mervyn LeRoy — sat on the dais, along with such long-time Stewart friends and costars as Cary Grant, Henry Fonda, Gregory Peck, Lucille Ball, Loretta Young and Jane Wyman.

It was difficult to remember the last time so many stars and directors of the '30s, '40s and '50s had assembled to toast an actor.

Among the guests were former President and Mrs. Gerald Ford and retired Air Force Gen. Curtis LeMay, in recognition of Stewart's rise from private in 1941 to brigadier general in the Air Force.

The evening, sponsored by the Friars Club of California, was not exactly an outpouring of sentimental nostalgia. Neither was it a roast. It was a night for laughs rather than tears.

Stewart was given the Friars' Life Achievement Award in the grand ballroom of the Beverly Hilton hotel, filled to overflowing, with Stewart admirers in recognition of his 76 movies over a career that has spanned some 45 years.

Milton Berle, brash as ever, was the toastmaster, flinging insults with abandon, sparing almost no one, least of all the jack-legged, mumbling guest of honor.

Uncle Miltie looked around the dais and set the tone for the evening early, "If a bomb hit this hotel right now, show business would go on as usual.

"Jimmy Stewart has brought a new meaning to the word 'valium.' He's the Burt Reynolds of the menopause set.

"Jimmy is the kind of guy who goes to an orgy and complains about the cheese dip. He's a sex symbol for women who no longer care."

Berle caught President Ford laughing and said, "If you'd shown that much animation while you were in office, you wouldn't be unemployed today."

Berle acknowledged the presence of Carol Burnett and said, "Carol has made thousands of people laugh, unfortunately while appearing before millions."

Henry Fonda, a friend of Stewart since they were starving young actors sharing a room in New York City, recalled a 1932 evening in their youth when they wrote their initials scatologically in the snow of a Manhattan street.

Gregory Peck praised the guest of honor. "A couple of years before I got to Hollywood I saw Jimmy in a picture that knocked my socks off.

"Jimmy is a decent, compassionate man who revealed the idealistic side of the American character in 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington.' I watch it every time it is replayed on television.

"There's never been a credibility gap with Jimmy. He's made of the right stuff."

Former president Ford said Jimmy "epitomizes the best in the American character. In all ways he is a giant of goodness."

Carter to miss Forrester coup

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — An unusual concoction of classical and modern dance, classical and modern music, and the versatile talents of renowned contralto Maureen Forrester drew enthusiastic applause Thursday at the National Arts Centre (NAC).

It was Les Grands Ballets Canadiens' first Ottawa performance of Adieu Robert Schumann by R. Murray Schafer as a piece choreographed by Brian Macdonald.

The music was composed originally for Miss Forrester as a concert number on a commission from the CBC and given its premiere here with the NAC orchestra. Macdonald subsequently devised the dance for his wife Annette av Paul and Vincent Warren, both principal dancers in the Montreal-based company.

It uses some of Schumann's multitude of songs in German and passages from his widow's diary translated into English and set to modern music by Schafer to tell of his last days in an asylumn as reported by Clara, who was a concert pianist when they married in 1840. He died in 1856 and she mourned him for 40 years until her own death.

The number was to have been the feature of a gala performance before an invited audience in the opera house Friday night marking the planned visit of President Carter. The gala was cancelled late Thursday along with the state visit.

The company had been counting on its performance before President Carter to give it a gala sendoff for a forthcoming 10-week tour of the U.S.

Adieu Robert Schumann will not be on the tour program. It can only rarely be performed because of its need of Miss Forrester's special talents, who is otherwise committed.

Vera Lynn to help us remember

OTTAWA (CP) — Dame Vera Lynn — still blonde, svelte, and attractive, though growing more motherly with the years than when she was hailed as The Sweetheart of the Forces in the Second World War — is to give two concerts this weekend at the National Arts Centre and sing two wartime songs at the Remembrance Day service Sunday at the National War Memorial here. It is her third visit to Canada this year.

Last year she observed Nov. 11 in Australia.

Accorded the title Dame in 1975 when she was "knighted" in the Queen's honors list, her latest honor was to be made the 152nd and the first woman president of the Printer's Charitable Organization, of which the first president was Charles Dickens.

AirCan jet struck by lightning

MONTREAL (CP) — An Air Canada flight bound for Calgary and Vancouver returned and landed safely at London's Heathrow Airport today after the plane was hit by lightning, says an airline spokesman.

Denis Chagnon said the pilot of the plane decided to turn back because he questioned the reliability of the navigational system after the lightning hit about one-half hour after takeoff.

Flight 853 was expected to arrive at its destinations about 3½ hours behind schedule, although Chagnon said he did not know whether the original plane was being used. The number of passengers aboard was not immediately known.

He said it was not yet known whether the plane had been damaged.

Indian pact surprise to B.C.

Provincial officials say the B.C. government knows nothing about federal government plans to get the province involved in negotiations over native Indian land claims.

"All we know is what we read in the newspapers," Bob Exell, provincial co-ordinator of native Indian programs, said in an interview today.

Indian Affairs Minister Jake Epp said Wednesday the federal government will attempt to get B.C. to begin negotiations with native Indians over land claims in the near future.

He said a formula for B.C. cutoff claims should be completed within the next few weeks.

Epp also said he has called a 2½-day conference in Ottawa next week involving provincial officials to develop native-supported programs in the province.

He said he will seek cabinet approval on his return to Ottawa for his settlement proposals to return to British Columbia Indians 33,000 acres of land cut from their reserves 60 years ago.

And, according to Epp, the British Columbia and former Liberal governments had agreed on a formula for returning 30,000 acres of the "cutoff" land to the 22 native bands affected by the expropriation by the federal government in 1920. The federal government gave the land to B.C. following the expropriation.

All this is news to the provincial government and Labor Minister Allan Williams, the minister responsible for Indian affairs, Exell said.

"We've had no request to attend any meetings."

"Mr Epp has never spoken to Mr. Williams about aboriginal rights, native title or about provincial involvement in land claims negotiations.

"He has never written to Mr. Williams about provincial involvement, he hasn't spoken to Mr. Williams — as a matter of fact he has never even met Mr. Williams dispite the number of times he's been in B.C. since he assumed the portfolio."

He agreed with James Gosnell, Nishga Tribal Council president, who said he still sees the provincial government as being reluctant to negotiate.

"The province does not acknowledge the existence of any unextinguished native title," Exell said.

"The province did agree to sit with Canada and with the Nishga to examine the elements of the Nishga claim but the last meeting was last year and there has been no formal request either from Canada or from the Nishga for a formal meeting."

During his two day visit here, Epp said Indian land claims could be settled by recognizing that Canada's native people have a equity in resource development.

He discussed the problems of North Coast Indians at Terrace on Wednesday, and met Thursday with spokesman of tribal groups and Indian organizations.

Couple wins permit suit

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice George L. Murray has awarded a West Vancouver couple $6,000 in damages from this municipality, citing the bureaucratic and patronizing attitude they met attempting to get a building permit.

Murray said M. L. Barthropp and Elizabeth Barthropp spent 26 months in a bureaucratic maze trying to get the permit approved. They finally received it Feb. 13.

The judge awarded $1,500 general damages to Barthropp and $500 to Mrs. Barthropp and $2,000 each.

Last December, after lengthy negotiations with the district, the plaintiffs went to the B.C. Supreme Court to compel the district to issue a permit. The district agreed, the couple's petition was dismissed and they were awarded costs.

However, Bill Jones, chief building inspector, then refused to issue the permit unless Barthropp agreed to indemnify the district against all claims incidental to the granting of the permit.

Barthropp refused and when his lawyer threatened to go back to court the permit was finally sent.

The federal department is seeking lost wages and medical costs incurred in January when a postman slipped in front of Vander Zalm's constituency office in Surrey.

Finance foul-up not foul play

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt says he is satisfied that financial discrepancies in a government-funded agriculture project near Cranbrook did not result from illegal activities.

Cranbrook ranchers said building materials for a government-sponsored project disappeared and might have been resold to fence private rangeland.

However, Hewitt said his own inquiry confirmed there was a lack of management control over the project, but no criminal activities.

Gardom would air report

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday if it were up to him, he would make public the findings of a B.C. Police Commission investigation into the Delta police force.

Gardom said the decision to keep the report secret was made by Delta Mayor Ernie Burnett, who has the report in his possession.

Four members of the force were suspended as a result of the investigation, including former Chief Mervyn Smith.

Indians seek up to $71M

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lawyer for the Musqueam Indian band has asked the Federal Court of Canada to order the government to pay the band between $45 million and $71 million in compensation for criminal and civil fraud in a 1957 land deal.

Marvin Storrow, acting for the 500-member band, concluded the band's case Thursday by listing 33 incidents of breach of trust that government agents committed while negotiating a lease of Musqueam land in south Vancouver to the Shaughessy Golf Club.

Buy house now: HUDAC

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prospective house-buyers should disregard high interest rates and buy now, Ernie Hnatiuk, British Columbia president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, said Thursday.

"Mortgage interest rates will likely decline to about 12 per cent during the first half of 1980," Hnatiuk said in a news release. "But inflation will continue and increasing costs of material and labor will offset any savings if you wait until then to buy a home."

He said people who have the money available for a down payment should opt for a short-term mortgage.

Hnatiuk also said that fewer homes will be built on speculation because of increases in house construction.

Oil industry has exploration funds

OTTAWA (CP) — The oil and gas industry already has more than enough revenue, under existing pricing formulas, to continue with exploration and development of frontier resources, industry and government figures show.

Federal energy department projections indicate that annual domestic oil price increases of $2 a barrel, the present policy, would quadruple producer revenues to $21.8 billion by 1990, up from $5 billion in 1978.

The figures, distributed to reporters Thursday at an energy department background briefing, also show Canadian Petroleum Association forecasts of available cash flow far outstripping frontier exploration cost requirements by 1990.

The figures are in contrast to petroleum industry arguments that rapid domestic oil price increases are required to finance future exploration and development of High Arctic and offshore resources.

But energy officials also said the alternative to not moving domestic prices more rapidly toward world levels would be a substantial drain on the federal treasury to subsidize the cost of oil imported into Eastern Canada.

Domestic oil prices at the wellhead now are $13.75 a barrel, about $8 a barrel below average world prices and $10 below those in the U.S.

The government also produced comparison figures between Canada and other industrialized countries showing petroleum product prices here among the lowest in the world.

The new Conservative government is locked into crucial negotiations with the producing and consuming provinces over a new energy pricing package. Ottawa wants to boost prices to near world levels as soon as possible, backed by Alberta, the primary producing province. The consuming provinces argue such a move would cripple their industrial-based economies.

The crunch in the drawn-out dispute is how to redistribute the revenues from higher prices among the industry, the producing provinces, and the federal government.

The federal government appears convinced that higher prices are also required to encourage conservation. Canadians used between three and four per cent more oil and gasoline in the first nine months of 1979 than in the same period last year at a time when U.S. consumers were in shock over short supplies there.

Department figures contrasted sharply with industry statistics on forecast frontier expenditures from 1980 to 1990. The energy department said about $10 billion would be required compared to the petroleum association's estimate of between $71 billion and $93 billion.

These figures were confirmed by association spokesman Jack Gorman in a telephone interview from Calgary.

The energy department said investments of $80 billion in frontier exploration in the next 10 years are unlikely as such a figure represents about half the national investment potential.

The present petroleum revenue sharing arrangement gives 45 per cent to the producing provinces, 45 per cent to the industry and 10 per cent to Ottawa. Provincial revenues would increase from $3.2 billion in 1978 to $13 billion in 1990 under the present formula.

The officials said increases of $4 a barrel a year, proposed by Ottawa, would roughly double existing revenue projections. That would provide the industry with about $45 billion in revenue and Alberta with about $26 billion by 1990, assuming parity with world prices by 1986.

A continuation of current pricing policy, however, would sharply increase the country's oil trade deficit to more than $9 billion by 1985, reduce federal revenues by $2 billion by 1985 due to soaring import subsidy costs and raise the lost federal share of production revenues to $10 billion by 1985, the government figures show.

Prime Minister Clark has already promised measures in a new federal budget expected later this month to offset the impact of higher petroleum prices in certain low-income and oil-dependent regions.

The federal government is expected to increase the excise tax on gasoline sold at the pump as one source of revenue for Ottawa to cushion the higher prices.

Federal officials made it clear they expect world oil supplies to continue to tighten in the next decade and that prices will continue to increase, perhaps smoothly but more likely in an erratic series of substantial jumps.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries now supplies about 60 per cent of world demand.

World prices are forecast to reach nearly $62 a barrel in Canadian funds delivered to Montreal by 1990. The domestic price delivered to Toronto in 1990 under the existing formula of $1 a barrel every six months is estimated at about $47 a barrel.

Canada now imports about 40 per cent of its requirements. Venezuela provides 45 per cent, Saudi Arabia 35 per cent, Iran 10 per cent and others about 10 per cent.

With domestic production forecast to drop in the 1980s from conventional sources, the federal government is banking on stepped-up production from the non-conventional oil sands and heavy oil deposits. There are two plants now operating; two more slated for construction and officials expect a fifth operation to be announced in the 1980s.

Maximum production from each plant is expected to bring about 150,000 barrels a day on stream for domestic use. Synthetic oil productions and extension of bountiful natural gas supplies to Eastern Canada is a major part of the government's goal of oil self-sufficiency by 1990.

Imports are expected to reach a peak of more than 640,000 barrels a day by 1985, up from the current level of 500,000 a day. Non-conventional oil production would then cut into the figure.

Canada was self sufficient in oil for three years in the early 1970s but production has since fallen behind consumption. Canada uses oil for 44 per cent of its energy needs, hydro electricity for 25 per cent, natural gas 18 per cent, coal nine per cent and nuclear power three per cent.

ARCTIC MYSTERY isn't really very mysterious, nor is it very Arctic. The two polar explorers apparently trudging through frozen drifts are actually dockworkers in Hamilton, Ont. The arctic wilderness they appear to be studying is merely a mountain of salt to be used this winter on area raods.

Trail of blood to suspect

EDMONTON (CP) — A frozen trail of blood and a sobbing teenage rape victim led police Wednesday night to a suspect in five recent sex attacks on city women.

The terrified, partially-clad 17-year-old broke free following eight hours of captivity and police were called after she scrambled barefoot through snow; darkness and sub-zero temperatures to find safety in a house south of the Edmonton Country Club.

Police units with tracking dogs flooded in and the flare of searchlights bathed the river valley as the massive manhunt tightened its dragnet around the river bank in west Edmonton.

They found the suspect, bleeding from slashed wrists, lying soaked, freezing and exhausted on the river bank. Police said the man apparently cut himself.

Police said Hendrick Albers, 22, of Edmonton has been charged with rape and abduction.

Insp. John Izatt, head of the sex crime squad, said the girl was about to take a bath in a city apartment when she was abducted.

He said more than 50 officers and three dog teams were sent to the golf course area after the teenager found refuge at the home of Cathy Dagg.

"She just had a bathrobe on," Mrs. Dagg said, describing the girl as sobbing and in shock.

Police said they believe the man in custody was also the suspect for four other sex attacks.

Favoritism? Nonsense!

TORONTO (CP) — Two judges in the Miss Canada pageant have denied charges by runner-up Marie Laurin of Quebec City that they discriminated against her.

"It's a bunch of nonsense," William Hancox, executive-director of Charlottetown's Confederation Centre and one of the five judges, said Wednesday.

"It's absolutely false," said Signy Stephenson, editor of Style Magazine.

Ms. Laurin, 21, of suburban Sillery, Que., lost to 18-year-old Teresa McKay of Calgary in what was described by the judges as an extremely close competition in Toronto on Monday.

Ms. Laurin said Wednesday the judges did not want a winner from Quebec because the province's voters might endorse sovereignty-association in a referendum next spring.

"The day I had my interview, the (Quebec government's) white paper on sovereignty-association was made public," she said.

"The members of the jury only asked me questions on the document: 'What does Canada mean to you? What do you think of separatism and what do you think of the white paper?' and 'What do you think of the Quebec government?' "

She said she told the judges she had not read the white paper and that politics were not a central part of her life.

Hancox said the judges asked all 31 pageant contestants about the Quebec situation and what should be done about it.

MPs to sit Monday

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs have decided they do not need an extra day off because Remembrance Day falls on Sunday this year.

A government official said Thursday when the matter was raised at a recent meeting no party leader expressed interest in joining many other Canadians in taking a holiday on Monday.

Women charged in beating death

MONTREAL (CP) — Three women from the nearby Caughnawaga Indian reserve were charged with first degree murder Thursday following the death Wednesday of a taxi driver from injuries suffered in a beating last month.

Charged with murder in sessions court were Barbara Norton-Homer, 28, Katy McComber, 21, and Sherry Delisle, 19.

Judge Andre Chaloux scheduled a preliminary hearing for Nov. 13.

The women also face charges of armed robbery, kidnapping, forcible detention and conspiracy in connection with the separate beatings of two taxi drivers near the reserve Oct. 23.

The beatings occurred a few days after David Cross, a Mohawk Indian, was shot and killed by Quebec provincial police in front of his home at the reserve following a high-speed car chase.

Breakwater issue in Sidney

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Sidney is faced with several controversial issues in the next two years and one of these — a major breakwater construction project — may affect the lifestyle of its residents.

That's the unanimous opinion of Mayor Norma Sealey, elected by acclamation on nomination day, and the eight aldermanic candidates battling for six council seats.

The big issue, they say, will be the proposed breakwater which the candidates feel will have both positive and negative effects.

The main concern of council will be to minimize problems arising from the impact the large boat-haven will have on the community.

Another issue which is moving gradually to the fore is the need for a mini transit system and two candidates have raised this issue in this year's election campaign.

A third is approval of a plan for the development of the privately-owned Rest Haven property, the only remaining choice bit of land in the town.

There are three incumbents seeking re-election plus a former alderman and four newcomers.

Bernard Ethier has served on council for three years and wants to see the on-going services program, such as roads and storm drains, carried out at the lowest possible costs to taxpayers.

Ethier is not in favor of expanding facilities at the recreation centre situated about four miles from the town.

He would rather see new facilities established in Sidney within easy access of young people who have no cars or bicycles.

He also doesn't think it is fair to the owners of Rest Haven for council to request some of the land on the island which forms part of the property.

Ross Martin is seeking reelection after serving five years on council.

A teacher at Stelly's Seconday School, he supports the community plan and wants the people of Sidney to have a say on what type of a breakwater should be developed.

He also wants public access to the Rest Haven property and a type of development which would benefit not only the developer but the public. He also favors expanding recreational facilities.

Eleanor Sowerby is seeking re-election after serving three years on council.

She favors the community plan in general, believing it will benefit residents.

But she warns the breakwater should be carefully planned because of the social impact it will have on the community.

Sowerby also wants Sidney to retain its individuality — not become a mushroom community.

Council should take a hard look at a proposal to expand recreational facilities, she says.

Engineering technician Daryl Ashby, seeking his first term on council, says council next year should aim to reduce spending.

He would like to see a five-year-capital budget endorsed by taxpayers, favors controlled development and would like council to look into the possibility of establishing a transportation system.

Marine engineer Edward James is known in Sidney for his active interest in soccer and is vice-president of the Saanich Peninsula Soccer Club.

He supports controlled growth and says he is concerned at the increase in vandalism and would like council to discuss this matter with the school board.

He says one of the reasons for the vandalism is the lack of transportation to take young people to places of interest like the recreation centre in North Saanich.

A small transit system would also benefit the elderly, he says.

James Lang, who is retired, served four years on council before contesting the mayoralty against Norma Sealey earlier this year.

He was defeated and is now making a try for a seat on council.

He predicts muncipal governments are in for a trying period in the next two years and feels with his experience he can be of service to the community during this period.

He opposes parkland acquisition or expansion of recreational facilities at this time.

Len McMillan, manager of Sidney Rentals, is a newcomer to municipal politics.

He backs the community plan and supports expansion of facilities at the joint Sidney-North Saanich recreational centre.

He thinks council should give a little more time to dealing with social problems, especially those involving the young and the elderly.

He wants to make sure that residents are fully aware of the implications of large breakwater and how it will effect their lives and pocket books.

In the end, he says, it will be residents who have to foot the bills for parking and other on-shore facilities.

Accountant Howard Norquay supports the community plan and the breakwater proposal.

He is against expansion of recreation facilities at this time because of inflation.

He is for the development of Rest Haven property, would like to see the island publicly owned but doubts this can be accomplished because of the high costs.

Amalgamation finds a backer

Mayoral candidate Keith MacGregor is the only candidate in favor of amalgamation according to an impromptu survey of 11 Saanich council hopefuls.

MacGregor, a retired brigadier-general, said during an all-candidates meeting earlier this week he would study amalgamation if elected Nov. 17.

When questioned during the Jaycee-sponsored meeting Thursday all the aldermanic candidates said dredging up the amalgamation issue again is a bad idea.

Former Saanich Mayor Ed Lum, running for a two-year aldermanic seat, said the concept of amalgamating with Victoria was defeated twice in referendum.

"Bigger is not best," Lum said.

Candidate Jock MacGregor said Saanich should maintain a separate identity.

Candidates were unanimous in their disapproval of the idea, saying the municipality would lose a lot by amalgamation.

Keith MacGregor said he believes merging services such as fire and police protection a good idea and intends to study the possibility of amalgamation if elected.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said amalgamation would be more expensive in the long run and would create a bureacratic monster.

Euthanasia justified - report

Times News Services

TORONTO — A body of the Anglican Church of Canada has accepted a report that says forms of euthanasia may sometimes be morally justified and that mercy-killing "prompted by a genuine concern" should not be condemned.

The report, a four-year effort probing the question of death and dying, was presented Thursday to the church's National Executive Council by a 16-member task force comprising physicians, lawyers, clergy and theologians.

"While the decision not to preserve life would likely be generally accepted, the means of attaining the end seem inhumane and unmerciful. Would active euthanasia be more compassionate?"

The report says physicians, the church and society should respect the wish of a terminally-ill person who wants to die with dignity.

Rev. Richard Berryman, a public relations spokesman for the church, said the report is a discussion paper — not church policy — that will help the medical profession and society come to grips with serious moral issues.

"Advances in medical science are posing us with serious moral questions we didn't face 20 years ago," Berryman said. "The church is trying to take some leadership on some difficult moral questions."

The interim draft of the report was released in July, 1977, and was greeted with a storm of criticism, most of which centred on complaints that the church was willing to sanction the death of mentally-retarded children.

Berryman said the Church emphatically denies the report has anything to do with allowing the mentally retarded to die. Rather, he said, it deals only with the future of the severely deformed and the terminally ill.

The controversial 1977 draft and the present report were edited by Winnipeg surgeon Dr. Lawrence Whytehead and Rev. Canon Paul Chidwick. Berryman said that in spite of the stiff criticism of the original report, its authors haven't changed their views.

"I've interviewed both of them and the only change is an elaboration and clarification of the original report so it's more gentle and less abrasive."

"It should be understood that only God is sacred and holy and as a result God alone should be worshipped," the report says. "Man should not worship life. Life is not sacred in itself. The respect we give human life derives entirely from its Creator."

It also makes the point that man must share with God a responsibility for the care of the sick and, because of advances in medical science, that responsibility now includes decisions on when "life" should not be allowed to continue.

"Co-responsibility suggests that we are called on to play a decisive role in shaping our lives and determining our destiny," the report says. "This responsibility extends to our dying and to deciding under what circumstances we ought to cling to life."

It also says that ending pain and suffering when there is no reason to hope for either relief or cure may be a good thing provided the patient is reconciled with God and with those around him.

The report says that when a decision to allow a person to die has been reached, the family of the patient must be supported and both society and the church should stand by the family of the deceased.

"It is deplorable that the Church has often issued platitudinous and pietistic counsel which can so easily mask the realities of the death experience."

Among other things, the report also complains that the Canadian legal system hasn't kept pace with changes in medicine, that there is inadequate moral support for the seriously ill and dying and that society still hasn't come to grips with death.

Its main theological point, however, is clear — death should not be viewed as an end, but as a transition from life on earth to life in heaven.

"Death always precedes resurrection."

Lumber jobs linked to fee

The amount of reduction in a government stumpage fee will determine whether one-third of Fort Nelson's work force will have jobs at its three lumber mills.

Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Thursday he would reduce stumpage fees — a timber-harvesting tax — for the three mills to offset increased transportation costs and slumping markets.

But the mill owners want to see how large the reduction is before making a decision affecting 750 workers.

Bob Lunde, general manager of Tackama Forest Products Ltd., met today with forest ministry officials in Victoria and was to report to his colleagues at Fort Nelson Forest Industries Ltd. and Omineca Enterprises.

A ministry spokesman said late this morning a decision on the stumpage fee has been made. However, no details were being immediately released.

The three companies sent a telegram to the provincial government requesting that stumpage fees be reduced by 10 per cent to help pay part of the cost of trucking lumber and wood chips to a rail connection in Dawson Creek, about 300 kilometres south.

The trucking has been necessary for three weeks since fire destroyed a B.C. Railway trestle near Fort St. John, cutting the rail line to United States markets.

The companies say trucking adds $1,000 to each rail car of lumber — an unbearable burden in light of falling lumber prices.

Waterland said transportation costs are a major component of the stumpage fee formula and the fees are automatically reduced when costs increase substantially.

The Bailey bridge and landfill which will replace the burned trestle are not expected to be operational until the end of the year, a B.C. Rail spokesman said Thursday.

The trestle caught fire after 11 unattended tank cars containing fuel ran off a siding and plunged off the tracks. Yves Tremblay, 20, a former railway employee, and Stanley Newdorf, 22, were later charged with mischief. Their cases are still before the courts.

Provincial Labor Minister Allan Williams said the threat of a shutdown is an over-reaction to an emergency situation. And Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said the mills should work out their own problems without government assistance.

Mayor Doug MacPhail, who is also a Tackama manager, said he doesn't know how Williams can say it's an over-reaction when he hasn't viewed the situation personally.

"There's been no cash flow for three weeks. The yards are plugged. And these are small independent mills, not tied into multi-nationals," he said.

The people in Fort Nelson are apprehensive and many feel the northeastern town contributes a lot more to B.C. than it gets back., the mayor said.

He predicted other layoffs will follow as secondary and services industries feel the impact from the lumber mills.

A union spokesman predicted there will be a mass exodus of workers because costs of heating and renting a home peak during the winter.

"There are some people who have to pay $600 a month for a lousy two-bedroom mobile home and another $100 a month for heating," said Larry Dochendorf, vice-president of the International Woodworkers of America.

Auto test

by Richard Russell

Fiat, those people who provide Gilles Villeneuve with his Ferrari in Formula One, have done a complete rethink for the North American market and the result has to be one of the most completely rust-proofed cars for sale in North America.

This little devil has undercoating in places most cars don't even have paint. The car is built using a great deal of rust-proof zincrometal in critical areas; the car is then thoroughly under-coated at the factory before being shipped across the Atlantic.

When the cars arrive at Autoport they are once again undercoated by Fiat personnel. The plastic fender-liners are then installed and the car is as ready as any to face the elements.

To back it up, Fiat provides a three-year warranty against corrosion perforation, and to back up their faith in the very tough mechanical components they offer a two-year warranty against mechanical defects as well. This is the best warranty in the small car business.

So what is the car like to drive?

An absolute ball!

Typically Italian, the little wonder just begs to be driven. The 1500 cc engine is a jewel.

The engine is a very smooth little piece of work that started instantly at any temperature and idled as smoothly as anything in its class:

The Milton Tribune Homes, August 8, 1979

The Fast Lane

by Jim Kenzie

Typical of Italian design, the Fiat abounds with unusual touches. The square overall shape is relieved by a continuing round motif, that is seen in the door handles, heater controls, instruments, and even the door lock buttons. It gives the car an all-of-a-piece look, and is much more pleasant than an overabundance of straight, Teutonic lines.

POPULAR MECHANICS

. . . extensive rustproofing and improved quality control put the Strada several leagues ahead of its predecessors. The body uses Zinchrometal in all rust-prone areas, as well as PVC undercoating and plastic inner fender liners. The fit and finish impressed me as top-quality throughout.

CAR AND DRIVER

. . . it underscores our contention that the Strada really is prime Car-of-the-Future material.

The only choice seems to be whether you choose to buy the Car of the Future now, or wait for the future. We think those of you inclined toward early conversion will find much comfort in this Fiat.

The Toronto Sun

by DAN PROUDFOOT

You have an affair with a Fiat, you understand. You don't simply own it in the way you buy, drive and ultimately wave goodbye to other mass-produced automobiles.

Pure Fiat means more fun to drive. The gearshift is so light it feels as though you need only to use your little finger to progress through the five forward speeds. The brakes are a delight, sensitive and sure. The engine likes nothing better than high speed operation.

New-car smell

The car even comes with the characteristic Fiat new-car smell, a kind of essance d'gusto. But the Italian company also has broken new ground, for the Strada offers exceptional ride and quiet at touring speeds compared both to earlier Fiats and to the competition.

DENVER, COLO. POST
by Bud Wells

A test of a sharp-looking two-door hatchback showed the Strada's best features to be good handling characteristics, especially in the snow; comfortable seating with lots of legroom and a strong-performing engine.

MOTOR TREND July 1979
by Bob Nagy

When driving cross-country, the one facet of an interior that very quickly asserts its presence is the seating. The Strada merits very high marks in this area.

What was especially noteworthy was that even at freeway speeds, the Strada, which weighed in at just under 2100 pounds, practically ignored the 30-40 mph gusts that were causing obvious problems for many other larger and heavier vehicles.

In addition to its outstanding stability, that Strada delivered a remarkably quiet ride.

AUTOWEEK FEBRUARY 19, 1979
by Jim Gandy

The Strada, by contrast, feels firm, stable, and predictable. Through a judicious combination of spring rates and shock valving, Fiat has made the 2050 lb. Strada give the driver the impression of a car weighing 3000 lbs.

The impression of weight translates to an exceptionally comfortable car to drive for long stretches.

Friday, June 1, 1979—Santa Cruz Sentinel

We found the brakes to be exceptional. It was our impression that they are the best offered in this field. They are vacuum-assisted disc up front and drums in the rear.

The econobox class is probably the most competitive in today's automotive marketplace. And the Fiat Strada has much to offer any buyer. To overlook the Strada when shopping for a new car in this class would be a mistake.

By Arnold Wechter

ROAD TEST/Oct. '79

Begs to be driven hard on serpentine roads. Has ride that swallows dips and bumps, and "easy chair" seat and stickability rivalling some sports cars. Designed to carry 4 and does so spaciously, along with lots of luggage. Top performer of these 5 cars. It's a real "fun car." Rating: A+.

ROAD & TRACK—September 1979

The Strada amassed a whopping 11 firsts (more than any other car) in the areas of ride and handling, braking, body structure, front and rear seating, ease of folding the latter, luggage and loading, the shopping bag contest, quietness and ingress/egress.

The Strada's long suit is interior practicality, an important set of criteria for cars of this class. Comments like "Love these large, comfortable seats," speak for themselves . . . its rear seat bottom can be tipped forward to increase carrying capacity. The cargo area is tall enough, for instance, to carry full shopping bags out of sight.

Based on laboratory tests using Transport Canada test method. Actual consumption will vary. Urban winter consumption will be significantly greater. (Note that you could easily make three diamond tricks, and thus the contract, if either defender had discarded a diamond earlier in the proceedings. The real challenge is to make three diamond tricks at this stage, even though the defenders discarded as well as they could.)

Now lead the queen of diamonds and, if West covers the queen with the king, win in dummy with the ace and exit with a spade, forcing East to win the trick with the king and return a diamond to dummy's nine.

If West does not cover your queen of diamonds lead, you again exit with a spade. East wins with the king and is forced to return a diamond from his 10-6. If he leads the ten, you cover with the jack; if he leads the six, you play your four. Either way, you win three of the last four tricks to bring home the contract.

The outcome is the same if, in the diagramed position, East's last spade is the nine instead of the king. You lead the queen of diamonds, as before, and it does not matter whether or not West covers with the king. Either way, your next lead is a spade, and the only difference is that, instead of East getting endplayed on the following trick, West is the one who gets endplayed.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, November 10
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on change, spreading efforts too thin, finding where you stand with "special" member of opposite sex. Popularity increases and so do social invitations. Key is to be discriminating—select quality. One who does much talking may be covering lack of knowledge.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stick to facts, leave speculation for another time. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons play significant roles. Accent on home, long-range investments, building on solid structure. Older individual is on your side, but you may not be aware of it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Write, communicate, ask questions, give full rein to intellectual curiosity. Member of opposite sex cares and makes it obvious to you. Quick decisions, trips, spirited discussions are on tap. Sagittarian is in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You learn more about money, costs, payments and collections. Family member makes gesture of conciliation that could lead to reconciliation. Be diplomatic, receptive, maintain self-esteem. Be ready to strike hard bargain where valuables are concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Define needs—decide what you want and how to obtain it. Steer away from self-deception. Gain realistic view of situations, places and people. Cycle high—despite minor delay, you are going places!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Restrictions actually work to your advantage. Know it, consolidate assets, contact authoritative persons. You can locate what has been missing—you gain behind scenes glimpse. Sense of direction will be restored—if you are determined and patient.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get backing; aspirations are fulfilled as many applaud or appreciate your efforts. You remove roadblock—goal is in sight. Spotlight on friends, desires, favorable decision regarding license or business transaction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Study Libra message—you get chance to take a more independent, profitable course. Accent on making room at top, imprinting style, rising above petty, "office politics." One in authority grants your request.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Follow through on "inner feelings." Past knowledge, experience comes into focus. You are able to successfully communicate, to bridge language and distance barriers. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius persons figure in scenario.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Budget, investment discussions are on agenda. Make inquiries, dig beneath surface indications. Element of luck, timing rides with you. You could strike pay dirt. Sagittarian aids in uncovering needed data. Success indicated on "third attempt."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be aware of possible legal loopholes. Check between the lines, study fine print. Accent on restrictions, rights, special permission and cooperative effort. Taurus, Leo persons figure prominently—and so does the number 4.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Basic requirements for successful operation come into focus. You gain through written material. Read, study, apply knowledge in practical manner. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. A special appointment is on agenda—be on time.

IF NOVEMBER 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are stubborn, dynamic, independent, creative and considered "sexy." Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. Significant favorable changes occur in December. You'll be free of restrictions, you travel and find constructive outlets for creative capabilities. Family situation, which had been cause for concern—especially during month of May—will be satisfactorily resolved. You are inventive and possess pioneering spirit.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Jack had been quiet quite a while, figuring out something on a scrap of paper as they waited for the traffic to start moving again. "See that number, Dad," he said, pointing to the car ahead. "I got something with it."

"The four figures?" Brian shook his head. "They're just figures to me."

"Come on." The boy smiled. "It's one less than six times the sum of the squares of its two halves."

You try!

SCHOOL DISTRICT 81
(Fort Nelson)
DIRECTOR OF INSTRUCTION

British Columbia's most northern school district requires effective January 1, 1980, a Director of Instruction. The School District is positive, dynamic, and developing. The Director works closely with the District Superintendent of Schools and the Fort Nelson Board of School Trustees. The Director carries out responsibilities as outlined in the Public Schools Act Regulations and is responsible for teacher recruitment, curriculum development, administration and supervision of programs and staff not directly assigned to a school, district evaluation programs, and the implementation and supervision of the special education program. CITY WATCHDOG RICHARDS Report #138. Many thanks to CFMS radio for their efforts to let Victoria City candidates state their platforms last Wednesday evening. Your City's Watchdog was unable to state over Joe Easingwood's radio talk show, because of possible libel, how people on Vancouver Island are possibly being ripped-off by a supposedly money making business opportunity advertised under the Help Wanted General columns in the Classified Advertising section of these newspapers. Therefore Your City's Watchdog strongly advises that people do not reply to any classified ad offering large sums of money for a few hours work daily or weekly until further notice in these reports. If you wish further information regarding City Matters, please continue to phone 383-6259 Your City's Watchdog, C. Joe Richards or write PO Box 154. Postscript: Remember if you elect C. Joe Richards Your City's Watchdog as an Alderman to Victoria's City Council he will continue to act as your Ombudsman.

HOW TO WRITE
CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less; and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

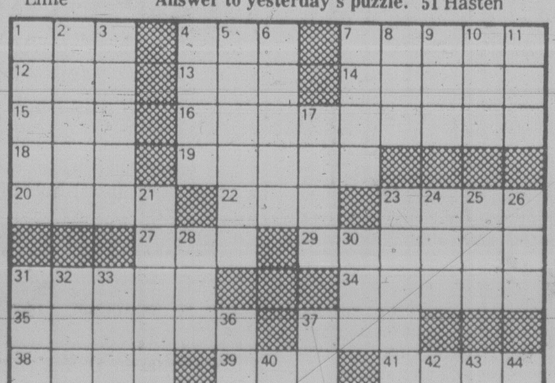
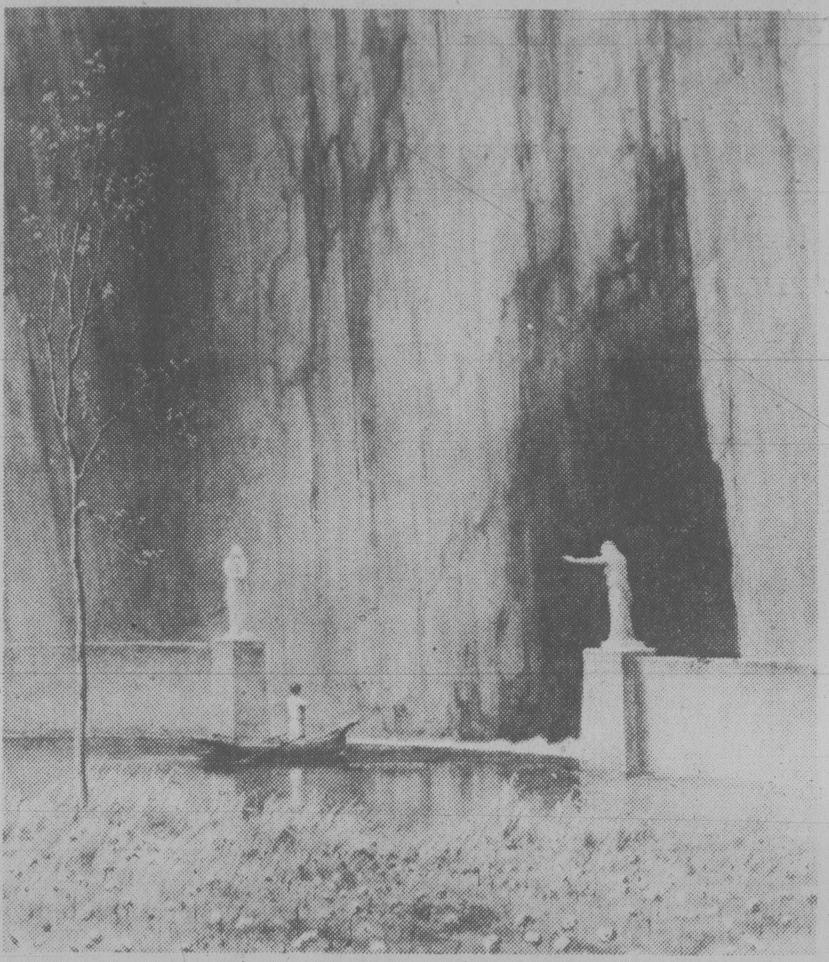
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.





SYMBOLIC PAINTING in watercolor by L.M. Kilpin entitled Gate of the Infinite, painted in Canada in 1910, seems to reflect the oncoming tragedy of World War I with its sombre symbolism and its foreground a-bloom with red poppies. It is on view in an exhibition of Kilpin's work at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria. (Trevor Mills photo)

Unheated greenhouse maintained by use

A greenhouse that is unused in winter is quite likely to be unusable by spring. As the days then lengthen and temperatures reach the growing range, the urge to start seeds in the shelter of the greenhouse may be delayed while the place is put into order.

An empty greenhouse is seldom visited by a gardener except when a dry place is wanted to store things found outside which should be inside. In winter the otherwise empty structure develops loose roof glass, dislodged in overnight winds or the weight of snow. In its moving, other glasses are almost sure to be damaged.

By spring, repairing both roof and side glass may take an amateur several days especially if cutting and setting glass is a new skill to be learned. Using the greenhouse even though in a small way, encourages normal maintainence which is easier than more extensive repairs later.

To provide something of interest which will benefit from the shelter of an unheated greenhouse, look around for a few hardy bulbs. It is rather late for them now, but if they are firm and weighty for their size — in the narcissus and tulip groups, they can be planted now into either planters or tubs. Large plastic pots are alright too, but drainage of small stones or other rough material is needed in all containers. The soil mixture must be kept damp enough for root growth yet free from saturation.

Other hardy, outdoor plants suitable for growing over winter in a cold greenhouse are tubers of Anemone coronaria, corms or started plants of outdoor Cyclamen orbiculatum, also winter and early spring heathers.

The Anemones and Cyclamens benefit by the shelter, blooming a little earlier than when outdoors, and the gardener benefits by having them at eye-level to watch as they grow day by day.

Two or three young heathers bought with their buds just visible will have the same interest. The tiny flowers can be closely studied at their different stages.

Don't lose sight of the fact that the growing of these plants in the shelter of an unheated greenhouse is a temporary plan. In May before the heat builds up inside to spoil the plants, they must be put into suitable garden spots to continue thriving for several years.

Meanwhile interest in greenhouse possibilities during winter even without heat, will increase. Who can resist the fresh, growing scent that comes from living plants in good soil?

Ventilation during days, watering when necessary — only in mornings, the closing of ventilators and door by four p.m., the assessing of temperatures before checking with the maximum-minimum thermometer — these will be learned skills. Also the skill of cutting and setting glass to repair a break promptly in bad weather — this is no mean test of patience and of interest when cold rain, or snow, is beating into the face. It is often at the 10 p.m. check on a stormy night that a break is found.

If not repaired, even temporarily, morning may find several precious plants damaged or even lost with the sudden loss of shelter.

The pleasures of a greenhouse containing a few favorite winter plants will be found worth the care required during the months from early November to early April.

Khomeini leads disintegration of Iran

Blind-folded Tehran hostage was paraded for refusing to give captors his name

By JIM KLURFELD
Newsday

WASHINGTON — The Iranian government seems to be in control of the students who have taken over the U.S. embassy, but it appears that the government is in control of little else, according to sources familiar with the situation.

Those sources say that the embassy takeover was clearly a well-planned, coordinated effort — not the spur-of-the-moment work of a group of overzealous students. The sources believe, but cannot be sure, that if and when the government gives the order the students will leave. And those same sources add that there appear to be leftist elements among those who are in the embassy, although there is no evidence that the Soviet Union is behind this effort.

But the embassy takeover comes against a background of rapid disintegration of government authority in Iran. While the Ayatollah Khomeini remains the most powerful figure in the country, he has lost significant support from some of the groups that made up his coalition when he forced the shah from power. He has the power to decide who can rule or not rule, but he does not have the power to govern.

Moderate political and non-clerical segments of Iranian society, in particular, seem to have been alienated. The resignation of the government this week was just the most dramatic example of the split between the secular and non-secular leaders. Throughout the country, the ethnic and regional separatist movements that have plagued the government are growing more severe. And there now appears to be a power struggle even inside the clique of religious leaders who rule the country.

The inability of the government to decide whether or not to receive presidential envoy Ramsey Clark could be an indication of the internal divisions.

The over-all political picture in Iran is one of chaos, according to those who are familiar with events. If the situation should continue to deteriorate, the country could slide into civil war or a series of succession struggles among factions, including the Moslem religious leaders, the military and the left wing.

Sources here are uncertain of how the over-all chaotic situation, or the most recent power struggles, relate to the embassy takeover. One theory is that the action has diverted attention from Khomeini's inability to govern the country and focused popular frustrations on the United States, which is closely identified with the shah's repressive regime.

But even with that chaos, the view from here is that the government can still control the people in the embassy. That assessment is based on at least two observations. The first is that Khomeini's son has been seen frequently on the embassy grounds. The second is that earlier in the week, when demonstrators took over the British embassy, they left as soon as the government sent in militia to clear the area. The demonstrators had attacked the British embassy because they believed, incorrectly, that former Iranian prime minister Shapour Bahktiar was living in England. Bahktiar is in France.

But there is also great concern because if Khomeini is not a man to compromise. For more than two decades he waged a battle against the shah that few thought he could win. And he has refused to compromise with foes inside Iran since he took power.

That is particularly discouraging to many here because they believe the only way to save the lives of the Americans is to wait the students out.

Ali offers to step in

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali, the former world heavyweight boxing champion who is a Muslim, is reported to have offered his help to secure the release of the 60 Americans being held in the U.S. embassy in Iran, even if it means exchanging himself for the hostages.

The U.S. state department expressed some interest in the idea and referred the boxer to the Iranian embassy in Washington, the New York Post said today.

"If agreed to by all parties, I would go," Ali is quoted as saying. "I'd go quick, even if they wanted to hold me instead of those people, I'd go. I'm a Muslim and I don't think they would hurt me.

Added Ali: "America is too big to just put its tail between its legs."

Oil rationing fears aired

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's oil supplies from Iran are proceeding "normally" despite rumors of threatened cutbacks to the United States because of the tense international situation, says Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn.

However, NDP oil spokesman Cyril Symes warned Thursday that Canada may face possible rationing — especially in the Atlantic provinces — if supplies from Iran are halted. He demanded to know the government's contingency plans.

Hnatyshyn brushed off the NDPer's concerns and told the Commons that Iranian oil was en route to Canada and that there was no "immediate prospect" Iran will suspend shipments.

"The best information we have from government sources in Iran, and with respect to the industry itself, is that there has been no shutdown and that oil for export from Iran is proceeding normally," Hnatyshyn said.

Hnatyshyn said his department is monitoring the situation but declined to say how the government would act in the event of a total cutback of Iranian supplies — 10 per cent of Canada's imported oil is from Iran.

"At the present time, the Iranian (oil) situation is stable," Hnatyshyn told reporters outside the House of Commons. "We are watching the matter closely."

Hnatyshyn said negotiations for supplies from Venezuela are continuing but that no new agreements had been reached.

He said the federal government was planning to send a delegation to the Caribbean country next month to speed the talks.

Iran continues to deny reports that it is cutting off or curbing oil exports to the U.S., but Iranian officials have told major customers their shipments are being reduced by five per cent in the fourth quarter.

The reductions in contracted deliveries by the National Iranian Oil Co. are retroactive to Oct. 1. That means some oil companies will be receiving far less for the balance of 1979 than they received earlier this fall.

The reductions were confirmed by British Petroleum Co. — Iran's largest customer — and by Exxon Corp., Ashland Oil Inc., Gulf Oil Corp., Shell Oil International and several Japanese trading companies.

But sources said they didn't know if the reductions signified a drop in Iranian oil production or a diversion of oil to the lucrative spot market.

Prices on the spot market have been running at almost double the official price of $23.60 a barrel.

PLO behind occupation?

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A Jewish leader at the United Nations says the Palestine Liberation Organization may be behind the occupation of the U.S. embassy in Iran.

Harris Schoenberg, director of B'nai Brith International at the United Nations, said Thursday there was certain circumstantial evidence of collusion between the PLO and Iranian students.

He said that after the PLO negotiated with terrorists last July for the release of the Egyptian embassy in Turkey, a connection was found between the terrorists and the PLO.

Animals' UN formed to offer protection

GENEVA (AP) — Swiss environmentalist Franz Weber announced Thursday the formation of a United Animal Nations (UAN) which he hopes will offer permanent protection to the world's endangered species.

The animal version of the UN will have its headquarters in Geneva, with an annual general assembly meeting and a security council that can be summoned any time to tackle "animal rights" problems. It will be financed by donations, government grants and fees paid by member groups.

The "nations" will include seals, whales and other endangered species. UAN membership will be decided by Weber, the Aga Khan, and three to five others.

PCBs converted into table salt

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Canadian chemist has developed a process for breaking down PCBs that he thinks could solve North Carolina's problem of disposing of the toxic chemical.

PCB-laced oil was dumped along 336 kilometres of North Carolina roadsides in 1978. The state has been searching for an adequate method of disposal for the contaminated dirt, which is still along the roads.

C. L. Bubbar of the University of Waterloo, Kitchener, Ont., said his process is inexpensive, quick and applicable to roadside spills.

Bubbar said in a telephone interview that his process uses the solvent tetrahydrofuran and a cyclic converter, a chemical reation chamber.

The solvent is combined in the converter with contaminated soil and in 15 to 30 minutes the PCBs are reduced to table salt. The organic material becomes inert and can be burned.

Bubbar estimated that one-half to one-ton converter could be built for $100,000 to $200,000 and taken by truck to the sites.

30,000 more layoffs in auto sales slump

DETROIT (Reuter) — General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. said on Thursday that they would lay off 30,000 workers and suspend or cut production at 12 plants that make cars that are selling slowly.

The auto industry has had slow sales all year, and an estimated 90,000 auto workers were on indefinite layoff at the start of this month.

Ford said 24,300 of its workers would be laid off for one to two weeks, starting on Monday, because of production suspensions at six car plants and two truck plants in five states.

GM said 5,700 workers would be laid off indefinitely as a result of cuts in production at three car plants and one truck facility in two states.

GM also said it was adding a second shift to increase production at the plant that makes the popular small Chevrolet Citation and Pontiac Phoenix models.

GM said it was taking the aciton "to bring the mix of 1980-model vehicles in line with current market demand," while Ford said it was trying to balance inventories.

The GM vehicles affected are light trucks, vans, the mid-size Chevrolet Malibu and Oldsmobile Cutlass and the full-size Monte Carlo.

Ford vehicles involved include the full-size Ford Thunderbird and Lincoln, the compact Ford Fairmont and Mercury Zephyr, the subcompact Ford Pinto and Mercury Bobcat, and vans.

National probe of crime urged

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Revenues from organized crime activities amount to about $50 billion a year, equal to half of the nation's defense expenditures, a conference on organized crime was told Thursday.

Michael Aguirre, former assistant U.S. Attorney and chairman of the "First National Conference on Organized Crime," said the money comes from drugs, gambling, prostitution, loan sharking, labor racketeering, land fraud and pornography.

"We need a nation-wide investigation by the appropriate U.S. Senate committee into crime, unions and business," Aguirre said

Virgil Peterson, a former member of the FBI in Boston and a member of the Chicago Crime Commission outlined the history of organized crime.

Philip Manuel, a former U.S. Senate committee investigator, said organized crime is seen in the public mind as "an entity called the Mafia."

Air crash suit

CHICAGO (Reuter) — An $18-million negligence suit was filed against Western Airlines and aircraft manufacturer McDonnell Douglas on Wednesday over the death of a television news producer in a DC-10 crash in Mexico City last week.

Producer Ken Lucoff, 35, of the ABC network, was one of 72 persons killed when the Western Airlines plane from Los Angeles crashed.

U.S. know-how gives Soviets boost with weapons systems

By WALTER PINCUS
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A government intelligence expert said Thursday that it was "a reasonable assumption" that the Soviet Union used sophisticated machinery purchased from the United States six years ago to develop the new, accurate guidance system in its SS-18, the world's largest and most destructive intercontinental ballistic missile.

Dr. Jack Vorona, assistant vice director for scientific and technical intelligence of the Defence Intelligence Agency, also told a Senate Armed Services subcommittee that:

— At least some of the trucks produced by a plant built with U.S. technology are being used by the military, and the plant's excess engines may be destined for other military vehicles.

— Illegally diverted IBM 360 and 370 computers may have been the cornerstone for a computer system that directs Warsaw Pact air defence.

— A student exchange program permitted the Soviets to send one young engineer to the United States to study "fuel-air explosives" — a particularly large-blast weapon system. The man, Vorona testified, is now involved in the Soviet fuel-air explosive program.

Vorona's testimony may signal a new attempt to curtail commercial sales sharply and limit academic exchanges with the Soviets by government officials who believe the United States should take a harder line with Moscow.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr. (Ind-Va.) who chaired the hearing, asked Vorona, "Would it be accurate to say American know how is being used to develop the Soviet war machine?"

"Yes sir, very accurate," the witness replied.

That view, however, is not held throughout the government, as battles within various administrations over the past 20 years have shown.

By law, the Commerce Department must licence sales of certain goods to the Soviet Union in a process that has been the focus of continuing controversy.

IN 1973 and 1974, for example, the Pentagon opposed, but the Commerce Department and the White House finally approved, the sale of 164 precision miniature ball bearing grinding machines.

Those machines, Vorona said Thursday "are making a distinctive contribution to the Soviet military effort, and could very well be producing the precision miniature ball bearings used in current and follow-on high quality" guidance system aboard Soviet ballistic missiles.

Vorona touched another matter of controversy involving Soviet trade by calling attention to "an Austrian firm" that is the world's leading producer of equipment use to make high-quality artillery tubes.

The Soviets, he said, have purchased "probably hundreds of millions of dollars worth" of this company's machinery, and now "have the greatest gun-barrel manufacturing capibility in the world."

$34B energy bill passes with ease

By ROBERTA HORNIG
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — With turmoil in Iran dramatizing the need for new domestic energy production, the U.S. Senate handed President Carter a major victory Thursday night by overwhelmingly approving the largest omnibus energy bill in congressional history.

The $34-billion package, approved 65-19, includes Carter's $20-billion program to get the country moving into the production of synthetic fuels from domestic coal and shale reserves.

It also creates a new government agency, the Synthetic Fuels Corp., which the president requested to run the program.

Further, the bill give Carter something he didn't ask for but has endorsed: A major conservation section that was nearly doubled in size to $14 billion on the Senate floor Thursday.

The conservation portion includes government grants and loans to homeowners to insulate their homes and for solar energy projects, and major expenditures for gasohol, geothermal, wood and wind energy projects.

"Carter deserves high marks on this," said the Senate's leading energy legislator, Energy Committee Chairman Henry Jackson (Dem—Wash.)

Jackson said the synthetic fuels program "in itself is the largest single program ever authorized by Congress since World War II."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd called the bill "a blueprint for this nation's energy security."

The bill's floor leader, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston (Dem—La.) attributed the bill's faster and easier-than-expected passage to the turmoil in Iran.

The biggest victories involved what did not happen.

On Wednesday, the Senate refused to scale down funding for the synthetic fuels program and to reject the creation of the Synthetic Fuels Corp.

Thursday, it turned back a move to prohibit government-owned, contractor-operated synthetic fuels projects.

It also rejected an amendment that would have gutted strip-mine laws, a move that would have endangered the energy bill.

Jackson said Thursday night that the Senate was ready to go into a conference with the House in the next two weeks. But the House is discussing the possibility of passing a new energy program, one more in line with the Senate's. If they try to do this, the conference could be held up.

Provisions in the Senate bill include:

— Creation of the Live-member synthetic fuels corporation.

— A first-stage synthetic fuels program to test the economic viability of converting coal into oil and gas and getting oil from shale and from hBr sands.

— A $6.2-billion, five-year program of loans and price and purchase guarantees to push gasohol as an important substitute for gasoline.

— A $750 million, four-year program, which grew from $475 million on the Senate floor, for a solar bank to loan money for installing solar equipment in homes.

— A $3.35 billion, four-year conservation bank that will issue loans for solar and home insulation equipment.

— $750 million for geothermal energy, $500 million for renewable energy sources and $100 million for wind energy.

— Money for a study of the environmental impact of synthetic fuels as they develop.

Brown's hat in ring

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown of California formally announced Thursday his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. presidency, saying the main issue is leadership.

With that, Brown formally launched his challenge to President Carter and U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy. Carter is to announce his candidacy Dec. 4.

His platform includes a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget and a national energy corporation to develop and manage the country's oil supply.

A startling new sight now greets tourists who gaze out on the Atlanta skyline from a plush downtown convention hotel — a billboard warning them to fear for their lives. J. K. Ramey, a tire dealer, battled city hall, bandits and vandals before finally erecting the sign on the wall of his downtown business: "Atlanta is one of the nicest cities in the U.S. . . . but it's got to where you can't stop at a red light safely," the 68-year-old Ramey said. The sign includes a scoreboard to keep a running tab on the city's murders, rapes and thefts.

U.S. oil merger bill protested

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada has told the United States that proposed legislation to restrict mergers and acquisitions by major oil companies conflicts with Canadian sovereignty.

In a note presented to the U.S. state department, the Canadian embassy says the legislation, proposed by Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.), "goes far beyond U.S. jurisdiction."

The bill also is sponsored by Senator Howard Metzenbaum (Dem. Ohio).

"It deliberately and explicity claims jurisdiction over foreign affiliates, including those incorporated in Canada, and therefore offends against Canadian sovereignty," the note says.

In sending the note, Canada has joined Britain and other Western European countries in opposing the bill, which would prevent the 16 largest oil companies in the United States from acquiring other large firms with assets of more than $100 million.

The note says that enforcement of the legislation could "conflict with Canadian law and policy."

Supporters of the bill say they fear that U.S. oil companies will use enormous windfall profits reaped in the decontrol of oil prices to go on a buying spree.

The legislation would force the companies to use their profits for internal expansion or pay them to stockholders in the form of dividends.

Oil companies fear the bill might represent a first step toward efforts to control the size of corporations.

Guevara emerges from hiding to rally congress against coup

LA PAZ (WP) — Walter Guevara Arze, Bolivia's constitutional president, made a dramatic appearance Thursday night before the Congress that originally elected him and declared that "I have not resigned nor will I resign the mandate conferred on me by resolution of the congress last Aug. 6."

Guevara had been in hiding since last week's military coup, but as a result of his speech it now appears the congress will once again ratify Guevara as Bolivia's constitutional and legal president.

Guevara's appearance Thursday night added another twist to the already confused and complicated political situation in which Bolivia now finds itself a week after Guevara was overthrown by Col. Alberto Natusch Busch.

By reasserting that he is still president and warning the congress that it risks political suicide if it enters into an accord with the unpopular and isolated military regime, Guevara reinforced himself as the leading symbol of democracy here.

Although Bolivia began to return to normal after Natusch Wednesday lifted martial law and press censorship, and promised to free political prisoners taken since the coup, there is still no agreement on how to resolve the political crisis that began when Guevara, this country's first civilian president in over a decade, was overthrown Nov. 1.

Guevara was nearly mobbed after he spoke.

Canadians off to Rhodesia?

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain is considering a suggestion that Canada and a number of Commonwealth governments contribute contingents to a small force to monitor a proposed ceasefire in Zimbabwe Rhodesia, the foreign office announced today.

The ceasefire in the bush war in the breakaway British colony will come provided agreement is reached at current peace talks in London.

A spokesman said a number of governments already have agreed in principle to do so. He declined to name them but said Australia and New Zealand are among those asked whether they would be ready to contribute contingents.

Britain has yet to formally propose the Commonwealth force idea at the nine-week-old negotiations, which it is chairing, between Bishop Abel Muzorewa's bi-racial government and Patriotic Front guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

Thursday night in London, the House of Commons approved in principle a bill giving the government power to put a British governor in Zimbabwe Rhodesia as a step toward new elections in the former British colony.

The Conservative government wanted the legislation enacted in the hope that agreement on the 14-year-old Rhodesian independence dispute will be reached at peace talks.

The legislation would empower the government to put a British governor in Salisbury to supervise the period leading to fresh elections in the territory.

In Ottawa today, Prime Minister Clark said Canada has not yet received a request from Britain to contribute to the peacekeeping force.

Clark told reporters today he informed British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher at the Commonwealth conference in Zambia this summer "That we would be prepared to consider a useful role if that were necessary in Zimbabwe Rhodesia."

Australian Deputy Prime Minister Doug Anthony said in Canberra that Australia has been asked by Britain to provide a 110-member force to monitor the ceasefire.

The Australian and New Zealand governments earlier today said they are considering the British request.

It was also announced today that Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda has decided to personally intervene in the Zimbabwe Rhodesia talks.

Kaunda, whose country is among several so-called front-line black African states providing bases for black nationalist guerrillas attempting to overthrow the biracial government in Salisbury, arrived in London on Thursday.

British officials said he was told by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in lengthy private discussions of the need for a quick settlement in the negotiations, which reach the end of their ninth week today.

Officials said he would meet with Mrs. Thatcher again today to continue his conciliatory role in helping Britain reach settlement at the talks.

Payoffs alleged in DC-10 sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — McDonnell Douglas Corp. and four of its top officials were indicted today on fraud and conspiracy charges arising from the alleged payment of more than $7 million in foreign payoffs to promote sales of DC-10 jetliners.

The 11-count indictment, returned in U.S. district court, names James McDonnell III, corporate vice-president and director; John Brizendine, president of Douglas Aircraft Co.; Charles Forsyth, executive vice-president of Douglas Aircraft, and Sherman Pruitt, sales manager for the aircraft company.

The government charged that McDonnell Douglas of St. Louis, the biggest U.S. defence contractor, concealed $1.6 million in payments to Pakistan International Airlines for the sale of four of the company's wide-bodied DC-10s.

The indictment said McDonnell Douglas refused to disclose the names of agents receiving the payoffs, when asked by officials of Pakistan International.

The indictment said more than $1 million was paid to four Pakistanis.

The company also was accused of concealing from the U.S. Export-Import Bank more than $6 million in payoffs to airline personnel and government officials in Korea, the Philippines, Venezuela and Zaire in connection with sale of DC-10s and DC-9s.

Anti-Iranian outrage grows

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — To the jeers of outraged bystanders and taunts of "Get the hell out of America," about 1,000 Iranians marched under heavy police guard near the White House today to demand that the deposed shah of Iran be returned to their homeland.

The Iranians' march through downtown Washington came during the U.S. capital's lunch hour and was observed by thousands of Americans. Many vented their anger with obscenities and threats.

One man carried a sign: "Bomb Iran; Save the U.S."

There was much fist-waving and shouts of "Go home, go home" and "Aren't you ashamed of yourselves, you pigs?"

Two counter-demonstrators were arrested for breaking police lines.

Marchers stretched two blocks and a cordon of riot-equipped police separated them from the crowds on the sidewalks. All along the route, demonstrators saw thumbs-down gestures of disapproval.

At one corner an American grabbed an Iranian's sign and set it afire, yelling: "Go home. You smell like camel."

There were also shouts of "Ayatollah's army — a bunch of bums," "Sand jockeys!" and "Only in America could you get away with this."

In a statement today, the Moslem students holding some 60 American citizens hostage since Sunday in the U.S. embassy in Tehran referred to demonstrations against the Vietnam war in calling on Americans to force their government to extradite the shah.

However, the mood throughout the U.S. was rapidly turning to anger. U.S. longshoremen refused to load ships bound for Iran, American airport workers said they would not service Iranian planes, and other Americans scuffled with Iranian students in several cities Thursday.

An Iran Air 747 airliner with 160 persons aboard was diverted to Montreal's Mirabel Airport on Thursday after baggage handlers in New York said they would refuse to unload the plane. The passengers spent the night at an airport hotel.

Anti-foreign feelings also surfaced in Winnipeg Thursday when an Arab spokesman's claim the Palestine Liberation Organization identifies with "humanitarian causes," was jeered at by University of Winnipeg students.

"Do you consider it humanitarian for the PLO to toss bombs in crowded airports and onto packed buses full of innocent people?" asked one of 300 students listening to Abdullah Abdullah.

Following Iranian student demonstrations in a number of U.S. cities Thursday, the White House has appealed to Americans not to vent their anger toward Iranian students in a way that would increase the risks faced by the Tehran hostages.

Top officials from the White House, the Justice Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service have been meeting for the past two days to consider ways, including deportation, to deal with any Iranians in the United States who may be found undesirable.

Woman shot, stabbed

A 23-year-old man has been charged with attempted murder after a 19-year-old woman was shot twice and stabbed several times outside an apartment at 1635 Cook Thursday night.

The woman, whose name has not been released, is in fair condition in the intensive care unit at Victoria General Hospital.

The man's identity is withheld until he appears in provincial court.

Police said the woman was shot in the mouth and back and received numerous stab wounds to her throat, head and back in the attack which took place at about 10:40 p.m.

A passer-by saw the woman lying on the sidewalk in a pool of blood and called police.

About an hour later officers arrested the suspect in a suite in the apartment building. Two weapons were subsequently recovered.

Sobering idea

Police throughout B.C. will be out in full force over the Remembrance Day weekend in a bid to nab drinking drivers.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom says more than 25,000 vehicles are expected to be checked between 6 p.m. tonight and Tuesday morning.

Free hostages: UN call

Times News Services

UNITED NATIONS — The United Nations Security Council called Friday for the release without delay of about 100 hostages held by Iranian students at the U.S. embassy in Tehran since Sunday.

Sergio Palacios de Vizzio of Bolivia, the Council president, issued the appeal "in the strongest terms" after a closed-door meeting of Council members which lasted more than two hours.

The meeting was requested by the United States delegate, Donald McHenry, on instructions from the White House.

Palacios said there was no disagreement on principle, but he did not respond when asked by reported whether the members unanimously agreed on the text of his statement.

In his statement, Palacios also urged UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to "continue to use his good offices to assist toward this objective."

All week, Waldheim has been trying, through personal diplomacy, to obtain the release of the embassy staff, enlisting help from a number of delegations of Islamic countries and the Palestine Liberation Organization. The hostages include some 60 American diplomatic personnel.

A UN spokesman said Waldheim is ready to go to Tehran and was assured he would be received by the Iranian authorities if he made the trip.

The hostages include 60 U.S. citizens and an estimated 30 to 40 other persons — mostly Asians. And a steady stream of Americans are reported leaving Iran in the wake of the crisis.

There have been unconfirmed reports that Waldheim might be asked to fly to Tehran to seek the release of the hostages.

A spokesman for Waldheim said he could not imagine that Iranian authorities would deny Waldheim entry to Iran or that the country's revolutional leader, the Ayatollah Khomeini, would refuse to meet him.

Three years ago, Waldheim flew to Algiers and obtained freedom for three Frenchmen who had been held by the Polisario guerrilla movement in Western Sahara. He was instrumental in freeing other French captives, in Guinea.

The secretary-general has also used personal emissaries for some humanitarian missions, including Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, an Iranian national.

Possible signs of a break in the standoff over the embassy hostage-taking here came today with news that a

Kamloops owes $$$$ in parking meter gaffe

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Red-faced city officials are refusing to talk about the possibility that they owe thousands of dollars to people scattered around the country, perhaps the world.

A slipup at city hall has left the city indebted to all persons who used parking meters or paid meter fines between the early 1950s and July 25 of this year.

All meter money shovelled into the Kamloops coffers during those 25-plus years was collected illegally because city council forgot to pass a resolution authorizing metered parking zones.

The gaffe was discovered by Kamloops lawyer Wally Wozniak, a man whose blood pressure jumps whenever the word meter is uttered.

Wozniak got so fed up with receiving parking tickets that he challenged two of them in county court. He argued that a parking bylaw had to be supported by a council resolution outlining meter zones. He showed that the resolution requirement had been ignored and last week won his case.

Council closed the loophole effective July 25. But this week a justice of the peace, hearing of Wozniak's victory, cancelled all meter tickets issued before that date.

Wozniak said in an interview Thursday night that the city is morally obligated to return all the nickels, dimes and fines collected over the years.

Kamloops, with a population of roughly 60,000, is strategically located at a junction of the two main highways entering British Columbia from Alberta and is a popular outdoor recreation area. The number of tickets issued since the early '50s might number in the tens of thousands; the amount of meter money collected might be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

But Wozniak said getting the money back might be difficult.

"I think it becomes a question of proof. The nickels and dimes . . . obviously you can't prove them."

But, he said, anyone with proof in the form of a cancelled cheque or receipt from the city for a pre-July 25 meter fine should be able to get the money back.

Crown names CP, CN in freight-rate rip-off

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal justice department has charged 20 companies operating in Alberta, including Canadian Pacific and Crown-owned Canadian National Railways, with conspiracy to lesson competition by fixing freight tariff rates.

The companies and 11 individuals, charged with conspiring and agreeing to lessen competition unduly in shipping general merchandise in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba from Dec. 1, 1960 to Nov. 4, 1979, are to appear in Edmonton provincial court Jan. 9.

George Orr, service branch director for the bureau of competition policy with the consumer and corporate affairs department, would not say how much money was involved in the shipping practices under scrutiny in the last 19 years.

"I can't discuss the specifics, but the matter has been investigated for more than a year. It's a matter of considerable size."

William Sokil, president of the Alberta Trucking Association, said the companies have, in effect, been charged with having an informal tariff board which sets fee schedules for shipping. Although Alberta doesn't have a formal board, other provinces do.

C. D. Radke, chairman of the Alberta Motor Transport Board, said there is no regulation on shipping rates in Alberta. In some Eastern provinces, rates have to be approved by the provincial governments.

The companies charged are: Alltrans Express Ltd., Atomic Interprovincial Transportation Systems Ltd., Atomic Transfer Ltd., B-Line Express Ltd., Canadian Freightways Ltd., Canadian National Railway Co., Canadian National Transportation Ltd., Canadian Pacific Transport Co. Ltd., Inter-City Truck Lines (Canada) Inc., Kingsway Freightlines Ltd., Kingsway Freightlines (Saskatchewan) Ltd., Midland Superior Express Ltd., Millar and Brown Ltd., Millar and Brown Freight Lines (Alberta) Ltd., Porter Trucking Ltd., Reimer Express Lines Ltd., Reimer Express (Pacific) Ltd., Reimer Express (Western) Ltd., Soo Security Motorways Ltd., and Western Transportation Association.

The charges carry a maximum penalty of five years in prison or $1-million fines or both. Orr said 19 co-conspirators are also named.

Tel doubles charges for boaters' phones

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co. is more than doubling charges to marine radio-telephone users effective Dec. 1, Dale Carter, product marketing manager, said Thursday.

Monthly charges are being increased to $15 from $6.90 and a connection charge of $21 is being implemented. Previously, people who took their boats out of the water during the winter months were not charged for reconnections each year.

"These are cost-substantiated rates filed with the CRTC," Carter said. "We've been dealing with the CRTC (Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission) since the spring on this and they've agreed the service should pay for itself."

Boat owners using radio-telephones now will pay $180 annually, up from $82.80. For owners who use the service four months a year, the cost will nearly triple to $81 from the current $27.60.

Rates for calls will be increased to 80 cents a minute from 70 cents before 5 p.m. Calls made between 5 p.m. and 8 a.m. and on Saturdays and Sundays will now cost 55 cents a minute instead of 45 cents.

Clark ready to impose oil increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark said today he will be ready to use federal powers to impose a plan for higher oil prices if agreement with the provinces is not reached by the end of next week.

Clark said at his weekly news conference that there is broad consensus on the range of price increases but there is provincial disagreement with a federal plan to impose higher taxes on oil companies, particularly those which are foreign owned.

Clark said he hopes that agreement on a new energy package, including price and conservation measures, will be reached at a one-day meeting with provincial premiers Monday.

He did not want to appear to be threatening premiers with the use of federal powers but was prepared to act if necessary.

"I believe it would be valid for us to come to an agreement by the end of next week," he said.

Clark said intensive discusssions with the provinces on a new energy package had led to a consensus on the range of price increases.

But there was sharp disagreement with the federal government over how much more money should go to the oil companies.

Clark said the federal government believes there should be stiffer taxes on oil company income.

Clark's remarks came a day after federal energy department officials released detailed background papers which indicated that the oil industry has more than enough money under current pricing policies to carry out an aggressive program of oil and gas exploration and development. This would move the country towards energy self-sufficiency by 1990. (See story on page 31)

Clark did not indicate the range of price increases on which there appeared to be consensus. But Clark and a number of his key ministers have said repeatedly that prices will have to rise faster than permitted under existing policy.

Current policy calls for a $1-a-barrel increase in oil prices every six months, or $2 a year. That translates into an increase of about six to 10 cents more on a gallon of gasoline and heating oil.

Psyllakis not involved in charges

A story in the Victoria Times Oct. 20 about fraud and theft charges laid in connection with the Donut King franchise operation listed Demetrio Psyllakis as a director of the company at the time of incorporation.

The Times has learned that this statement may have led some readers into believing that Psyllakis was involved in the criminal charges whereas he had, in fact, resigned as a director and sold his shares in the company in mid-1978 and had not been involved in the business dealings of this or any related companies.

City youngsters lend an ear to Beethoven

Elementary school children are going to university and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra this week.

By today, more than 3,000 Victoria children in Grades 6 and 7 will have enjoyed an hour's orchestral exposure to Beethoven, opera and the music from Rocky.

For many of them, it's their first exposure to live symphony music.

Under the direction of Glen Fast, assistant conductor of the Vancouver Symphony, the orchestra is giving six concerts at the University Centre auditorium.

There were two performances Wednesday and two more today and Friday.

Wednesday's performances were sponsored by the Musicians' Performing Trust Fund and the auditorium was donated by UVic.

The Grades 6 and 7 pupils in School District 61 — more than 1,000 a day — are being bused to the university for the concerts at 10 and 11:15 a.m.

Another program will be arranged for Grades 4 and 5 early in the new year.

Famed U.S. surgeon here for seminar

Dr. Everett Koop, famed surgeon-in-chief at Philadelphia's Children's Hospital, will be in Victoria today and Saturday on a visit sponsored by the Victoria Pro-Life Society.

Tonight at 8 in the Arbutus Secondary School, at Edgelow and Finnerty, he will show the film Abortion of the Human Race at a meeting that is free and open to the public.

For $7.50 on Saturday people will be able to attend a seminar at the school from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The fee will also cover lunch, to be served at noon.

A discussion on infanticide in North America will follow the showing of the film Slaughter of the Innocents. The film, Abortion of the Human Race, will also be shown. Euthanasia will be discussed after the showing of the film Death by Someone's Choice.

Probably the best-known pediatric surgeon in North America, Koop was the subject of more than 5,000 newspaper and magazine articles in 1974 when he separated Siamese twins flown in from the Dominican Republic.

He made international headlines again in 1975 when he reconstructed the rib cage of a baby born with his heart outside his body.

In 1977 the media flocked to Children's Hospital to hear how Koop had separated another pair of Siamese twins, having had to kill one of the babies to save the other because they shared 1½ hearts.

Koop's concern about the declining value of human life began in 1973 with the United States Supreme Court's decision to legalize abortion. Soon afterwards he began to utilize his gifts as a writer and speaker to warn the public about the danger he saw. In 1976 he wrote The Right to Live; The Right to Die and a year later, The Slide to Auschwitz.

He is now in the middle of a $3 million project, using documentary movies, a book, a record album and seminar lectures to raise public reaction against the taking of human life.

Words will fly at UVic Nov. 17

Some of B.C.'s most articulate students will debate in the annual University Cup Debate Tournament Nov. 17 at the University of Victoria.

The question: Whether the federal government should retain ownership of the economically profitable publicly-owned corporations.

The debates, starting at 10.30 a.m., will be held in C wing of the Clearihue Building.

The public is invited to attend and free refreshments will be served.

The University Cup was donated in 1976 by the Victoria Jaycees to help establish college debating in B.C.

The first two years, the cup was won by UVic debaters. In 1978 it was captured by a UBC team.

Although UVic and UBC have been the winners in the past, Royal Roads Military College, Malaspina College and the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific have been making a name for themselves in debating.

The debaters will be hosted by the University of Victoria Debate and Speech Society.

New York

The stock market rallied sharply today amid hopes for a letup in credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve Board and a possible peak in interest rates.

Late Thursday the Federal Reserve reported a $400 million decline in the basic measure of the money supply, surprising many analysts who hadbeen expecting a substantial increase.

That added to recent tentative evidence of a slowing in monetary growth — a trend which they has been trying to encourage in an effort to restrain inflation.

As a result, hopes rose that the Federal Reserve could now pursue that goal without clamping down further on credit, and that interest rates might peak out soon.

New York's Citibank raised its prime lending rate Friday to 15½ from 15¼ per cent, with most major banks joining in the increase. But by Citibank's formula for computing the basic rate on blue-chip loans, it could have posted an even larger increase.

Amid those developments, the market showed few ill effects from the continuing tension in Iran.

Canadians off to Rhodesia?

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain is considering a suggestion that Canada and a number of Commonwealth governments contribute contingents to a small force to monitor a proposed ceasefire in Zimbabwe Rhodesia, the foreign office announced today.

The ceasefire in the bush war in the breakaway British colony will come provided agreement is reached at current peace talks in London.

A spokesman said a number of governments already have agreed in principle to do so. He declined to name them but said Australia and New Zealand are among those asked whether they would be ready to contribute contingents.

Britain has yet to formally propose the Commonwealth force idea at the nine-week-old negotiations, which it is chairing, between Bishop Abel Muzorewa's bi-racial government and Patriotic Front guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

Thursday night in London, the House of Commons approved in principle a bill giving the government power to put a British governor in Zimbabwe Rhodesia as a step toward new elections in the former British colony.

The Conservative government wanted the legislation enacted in the hope that agreement on the 14-year-old Rhodesian independence dispute will be reached at peace talks.

The legislation would empower the government to put a British governor in Salisbury to supervise the period leading to fresh elections in the territory.

In Ottawa today, Prime Minister Clark said Canada has not yet received a request from Britain to contribute to the peacekeeping force.

Clark told reporters today he informed British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher at the Commonwealth conference in Zambia this summer "That we would be prepared to consider a useful role if that were necessary in Zimbabwe Rhodesia."

Australian Deputy Prime Minister Doug Anthony said in Canberra that Australia has been asked by Britain to provide a 110-member force to monitor the ceasefire.

The Australian and New Zealand governments earlier today said they are considering the British request.

It was also announced today that Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda has decided to personally intervene in the Zimbabwe Rhodesia talks.

Kaunda, whose country is among several so-called front-line black African states providing bases for black nationalist guerrillas attempting to overthrow the biracial government in Salisbury, arrived in London on Thursday.

British officials said he was told by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in lengthy private discussions of the need for a quick settlement in the negotiations, which reach the end of their ninth week today.

Officials said he would meet with Mrs. Thatcher again today to continue his conciliatory role in helping Britain reach settlement at the talks.

Payoffs alleged in DC-10 sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — McDonnell Douglas Corp. and four of its top officials were indicted today on fraud and conspiracy charges arising from the alleged payment of more than $7 million in foreign payoffs to promote sales of DC-10 jetliners.

The 11-count indictment, returned in U.S. district court, names James McDonnell III, corporate vice-president and director; John Brizendine, president of Douglas Aircraft Co.; Charles Forsyth, executive vice-president of Douglas Aircraft, and Sherman Pruitt, sales manager for the aircraft company.

The government charged that McDonnell Douglas of St. Louis, the biggest U.S. defence contractor, concealed $1.6 million in payments to Pakistan International Airlines for the sale of four of the company's wide-bodied DC-10s.

The indictment said McDonnell Douglas refused to disclose the names of agents receiving the payoffs, when asked by officials of Pakistan International.

The indictment said more than $1 million was paid to four Pakistanis.

The company also was accused of concealing from the U.S. Export-Import Bank more than $6 million in payoffs to airline personnel and government officials in Korea, the Philippines, Venezuela and Zaire in connection with sale of DC-10s and DC-9s.

HOMES TODAY

Selling privately can be an ordeal

While some vendors do sell their homes privately, thereby avoiding the commission paid to a realtor, this path can be time-consuming and expensive. Many who do try this route later turn to a professional because of the amount of work involved and because of the pitfalls that have to be contended with.

If you do decide to try to sell privately, here are some points to consider from A. E. LePage Coast to Coast Realty Service.

— Find out what similar homes in your neighborhood sold for recently. Neighbours sometimes inflate the value of their property, so information from them is not always reliable.

— Set a realistic price on your home equal to or just below your competition. Don't discount your house by the commission. If you can sell the property after all your time and work, then you've earned the commission.

— Advertise your home in newspapers (always put a price in the ad), order a sign for the outside.Have a neighbour or friend on hand for the inspection because the prospect could be potentially dangerous.

— Be ready to show your home. Schedule your time and your family's so you can meet prospects. Have someone at home at all times to answer telephone calls. Many prospects won't call twice and you could lose a potential buyer.

— When showing the house, don't talk too much say realtors. Prospects are not paying a social visit. Never insult your prospect's intelligence by pointing out the obvious such as, "This is the kitchen," or "This is the living room."

— Spot bargain hunters looking for a "deal". Just like you are trying to make money on the selling price, they often are trying to get an unrealistic saving on the purchase price. These people are not serious buyers.

— Once you have an interested buyer, you must qualify him and negotiate the sale. You must ask how much money he has as a down payment, how much he earns, if he has any debts or liabilities and how much. Don't start bargaining over items not included in the sale until the initial agreement has been reached.

— Contact your lawyer to prepare the contract between you and the buyer. A search will be made to insure proper transfer. Deliver the contract to the buyer's lawyer as soon as possible, have the purchasers sign it, then return it with a cheque to your lawyer.

— Be prepared for closing costs and rebates. Such costs include your lawyer, banker, insurance premiums, fuel company rebates, title charges and net property tax rebates.

While vendors naturally will not want to set the price below market value in order to move the house more quickly, they will have to be realistic in their appraisal of its value. Setting the market price too high leaves the house on the market too long, so that people begin to believe that there is something wrong or it would have sold.

ARCHITECTS ANSWER

Putting on an addition: matching house's style

By RICHARD HUNTER

QUESTION:

We have a small house and a limited budget. To gain space, we turned a garage into a rec room, which is, unfortunately not accessible from the house. We are considering a small addition to make access possible, but would like to have it in keeping with the style of the house, which was built in 1917. Would it be wise to consult an architect on this ?

ANSWER:

Since you care about the style of your house, you are more likely to receive useful suggestions from an architect than one not similarly trained. It may not be necessary for him to make drawings in this case. Perhaps a quick sketch, or no sketch at all, will solve the problem. On the other hand, if the style and functional solutions are obvious, an architect may not be able to tell you anything you don't already know. It depends somewhat on your own expectations. But in any event, it will cost you nothing to ask an architect his fee for a short consultation.

QUESTION:

While in Seattle this summer, I saw a collection of Frank lloyd Wright's drawings, framed and selling for about a hundred dollar each. Is this common?

ANSWER:

No. It is doubtful whether the drawings you saw were originals. If they were, they were likely pulled from a wastebasket by some long-gone apprentice. And I suppose forgeries are not out of the question, since Wright's drawings would be easy for many people to replicate.

The originals of virtually all extant drawings — and many of Louis Sullivan's as well — are in repository with the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation at Taliesin West near Scottsdale, Arizona.

If you have a question you'd like answered by an architect, send it in to the Homes Today Editor, Victoria Press, 2621 Douglas Street, V8W 2N4. Watch for the reply in this column in future issues.

New ceramic tile can be put directly over old

By LIS KING

You've seen it a thousand times: the outmoded bathroom tiled three quarters up the wall, or the fairly new bathroom tiled in some outlandish color.

And usually that's the way they're left . . . because replacing them with new ceramic tile is thought to be a messy and expensive process.

"But that isn't so anymore," say tile experts.

Newly developed setting materials not only make it entirely possible to install new ceramic tile right over existing tile floors and walls, it's also the easiest and least expensive of all renovation techniques because preparation work is minimal.

Explain the experts : "A sound ceramic tile floor is sure to be level, and tiled walls should be square and plumb. So, when you tile directly over tile, there's none of the usual sub-floor or wallboard leveling.

"Also, the old tile job makes it easier to plan the new tile lay-out for the least amount of cuts."

They also warn that the old tile surfaces must be structurally sound and well-bonded. If they're not, you should indeed rip them out and start from scratch.

But if they're okay, all the preparation they need is a good cleaning with a strong detergent plus sanding with carborundum paper.

The abrasive action will give better bond for the new tile. After sanding, rinse with clear water and let dry completely.

For the tile setting you can use epoxy adhesives or mortars, mastics, or sanded-latex portland cement mortars. Conventional grouting materials can be used.

The tiling itself is a simple process, easily handled by any reasonably handy do-it-yourselfer.

If you're a do-it-yourselfer, you probably have most of the tools needed for tile setting around the house already.

A tile cutter and tile nipper are the only nonstandard tools needed, and you can rent those from your tile retailer for a few dollars.

If the bath is tiled three quarters up the wall and you'd like one sleek stretch of ceramic tile all the way to the ceiling, install wallboard on upper part of the wall to make up for the thickness of the tile below it. Then tile the whole thing.

White is back in vogue for baths. Multicolored and mixed towels look fine against the white, so that its not necessary to buy a whole new array of towels all at once.

Scale of furniture is diminishing to fit smaller rooms

APARTMENT LIVING

The buyers who flocked to the fall Southern Furniture Market in New York recently never succeeded in putting the state of the economy far from their minds. In every crowded showroom, it was the inescapable topic.

However, whether the future brings production to a crawl, sends it soaring forward or leaves it unaffected, furniture makers seem universally agreed on at least one thing: people are worried about having to make do with less living space and more inflation.

The result was small-scale, slimmed-down furniture, and a high proportion of linear pieces.

"Everything we've done this year has been for the smaller space," said Martin R. Liebhold, president of the Landes Manufacturing Co., a 26-year-old California concern that describes its focus as "the young moderns who are well-educated, mobile, receptive to good design and have a limited budget."

A manufacturer of moderately priced contemporary furniture voiced similiar concerns: "The problem for us has been to meet the problem of space without adding to the inflationary spiral. Rather than using short cuts, and taking material out, we're trying to be smarter in the way we make something."

A good-looking 88-inch couch that succeeds in being thoroughly plump despite its lack of separate back and seat cushions was one of the company's solutions, as it is planned to retail at about $550. Even concerns such as the Baker Furniture Co., geared to the affluent, concede the existence of the trend. "Much as we'd like to make our pieces big and grand, we have to watch size," said Roderick G. Kreitzer, executive vice president.

"Room sizes are coming down and we needed some smaller-scale important living room pieces." Although one designersaid he was certain that the demand for massive upholstered pieces would continue, he was equally certain that manufacturers would have to start including a similarly luxurious look in a reduced size. And once dimension is reduced, he said, proportions become crucial.

To illustrate, he indicated his new modular couch grouping. Its overall size was smaller than usual, with the seat depth narrowed to 24 inches and the seat height raised to 20 inches. Not only were the couches comfortable, but they neither looked nor felt shallow.

Design Institute of America offered couches into which coffee tables and shelves could be fitted to furnish a room that had no space for other pieces. Directional Industries of North Carolina showed such "systems" as a chaise, ottoman and table identically covered in gray flannel. (There was a Lucite tray to protect the top of the table.) A handsome and architectural group, it would lend itself equally well to almost any room or function in house or office.

At Henredon Furniture Industries, there was a unit containing a queen-size bed flanked by two cupboards. Sized to fit against one 10-foot wall, the single piece offered a storage equivalent to two 78-inch triple-drawer dressers. Retailing at $3,000, its principal economy was space rather than budget.

Another extremely versatile and space-conscious item was the dining room table offered at Landes that contracts to become a small buffet or three-tier shelf. Planned to retail at around $155, the stained pine table-console and its companion canvas dining chair at $95 were bargains both in price and in space use. And they fold away easily for storage in the back of a closet.

formal look of outdoor furniture, at about $200.

What does it take to make a fence ?

LITTLE CEMENT HOUSES perch beside the wrought iron gate in the stone wall that runs in front of the Queen Anne style house at the corner of Craigflower and Sunnyside in Vic West.

THIS GRACIOUS OLD GATEWAY looks more suited to the driveway of a large estate, than to the white house immediately inside, and indeed, that's just what it was. This was the entrance to 'Burleith', home of James Dunsmuir, who also built Hatley Castle. Dunsmuir left 'Burleith' about 1909, after which the land was sub-divided. 'Burleith' itself burned down in the thirties, but the gatekeeper's house still stands, as it always did, just inside the gate.

WATTLE FENCE ABOVE, of inter-woven twigs, is on Arbutus Drive.

THE FENCE ON THE LEFT is interesting because, though the railings look like heavy wrought ironbetween brick pillars, they are really made of cement. Paul Cocco, who owns it, had the mold sent from northern Italy, made each one here himself. This fence can be seen at 2493 Sinclair.

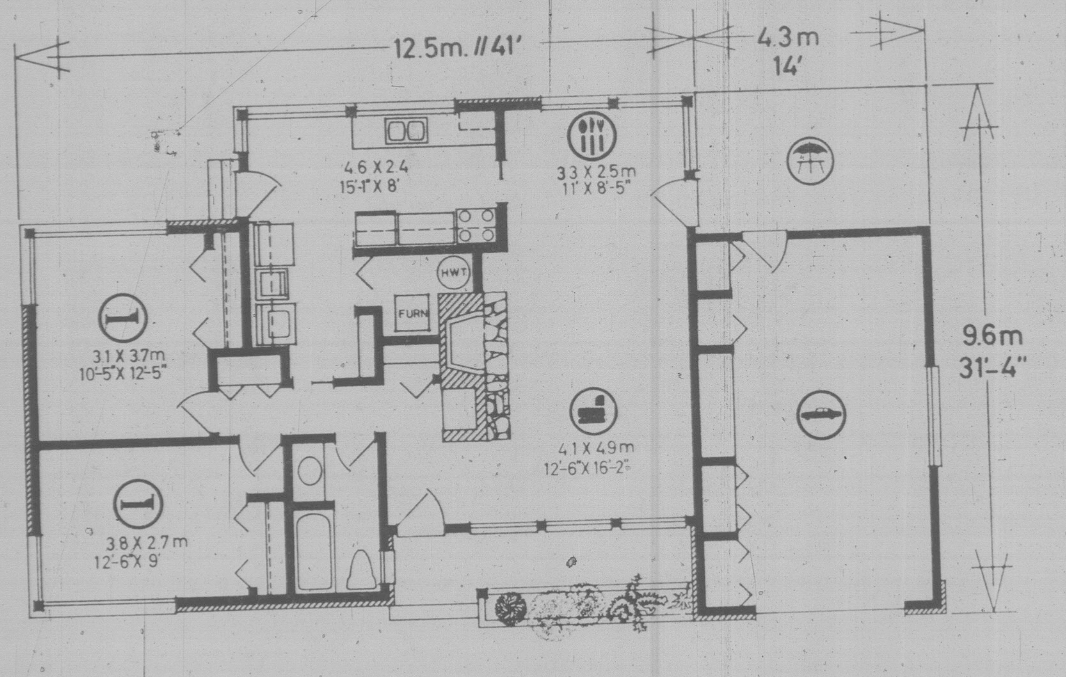
PLAN OF THE WEEK

No-basement bungalow for a small family



Here's a charming little non-basement bungalow which provides abundant living space and many convenience features for the smaller family.

The design is perfectly suited to the narrow-to-medium frontage residential building lot and would make an eye-appealing addition to any urban development. The low-profile exterior, finished in fieldstone veneer and chimney, with mixed vertical and horizontal channel siding and heavy shake roof, provides a solid, massy facade which suggests permanence and durability.

The weather-protected entry leads into a reception foyer and closet storage area, from which one movesnaturally right into the long rectangular living-dining room combination.

The living room features wide, full-height windows for excellent natural light, and an island cantilevered-hearth masonry fireplace. The dining room separates from the kitchen via convenient pocket door and has access to a rear patio for outdoor dining in fine weather.

A well-planned galley-style kitchen has abundant natural light, an excellent work triangle configuration and generous cupboard storage. A compact dinette area invites the installation of built-in banquette-style nook furnishings.

A laundry-utility area, with side-by-side configuration of washer-tub-dryer, is positioned conveniently to both bedroom and dining areas for easy access.

Both bedrooms are positioned well away from the main entertaining area for freedom from disturbance. Each has excellent natural fight and generous closet storage, and both are in close proximity to the central bath and linen storage area.

The single enclosed garage contains a full-length wall of storage cabinets and workbench; a feature guaranteed to please the home handyman and amateur auto mechanic.

For those who prefer, an alternate plan with full basement could be provided.

Plans for design No. 65-1158 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $85.00 for the first set and $14.00 for each additional set, or by the backage. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $120.00 and an eight-set plan package, also including the first set, is only $150.00.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

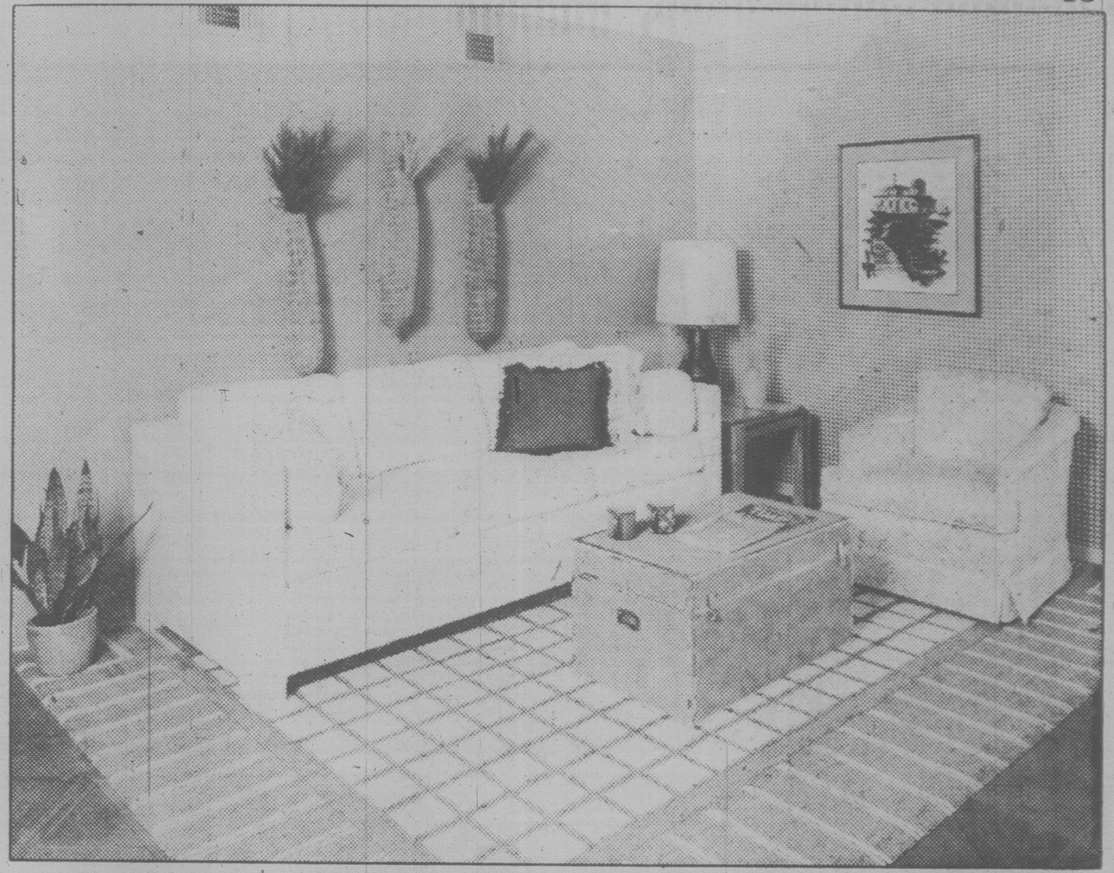
Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Magazine, Series 42, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2.00 plus .75 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

INTERIOR DESIGN

A family room in a kitchen

By PAULINE GRAVES



Most family rooms are a part of the kitchen, or very close to it. And when they are part of it, usually a counter or partition marks a physical separation between the two areas. However, even though the two areas are partially open to each other, the partition or counter tends to cut down on the size of both.

Shown here is a room by interior designer Beverly Trupp which appears to be a living room because the entire room cannot be seen. Actually, this is the corner of a large kitchen, in which this section is the family room. There is a dividing of areas, but not a physical barrier. Instead, the area rug outlines the family room space. And the wallpaper, in checkered design on the end wall, adds to the family room definition.

The entire room presented a problem because of its shape, almost a square. A counter or a partition did not fit as logically into the space as it would into an L-shape room or even one that is long and narrow. Therefore, the furnishings themselves had to provide the answer. The contrast between the rug and the wood floor, the patterned paper versus the plain wall, and upholstered furniture and kitchen equipment makes the division very clear. And the total impression is that of spaciousness.

The furnishings themselves merit notice. Instead of a conventional coffee table, a brass bound small trunk serves. It has adequate table-top dimensions for accessories, and the inside can be used for storage.

Picture caption: This corner of a kitchen is the family room section, and the furniture has a no-nonsense quality about it. Straight lines and sturdy fabrics are a soft complement to the appliances on the other side of the room.

IT'S GOOD BUSINESS
TO BUY A FINE HOME IN THE UPLANDS

The decision to buy a fine home in Victoria makes a lot of common sense in these inflationary times. Good land is a stable commodity; it is very scarce and the demand has never been greater. Here is, for example, a three-bedroom Tudor beauty in gracious Uplands. The main floor boasts large formal living and dining rooms with gleaming dark oak floors; a spacious family room for music, TV, etc.; a master bedroom suite, complete with sun room. Upstairs is one very nice bedroom (with view) and an extra large studio bed-living room. Two full baths plus ½ bath in full basement. All new plumbing and wiring and very easy to heat. New 20-year roof, double garage. A pleasure to show. New list price $172,000. Serious offers and trades considered.

How much heat escapes and where it gets out

Half the heat produced by the furnace in a typical house quickly escapes from the home if no energy conservation steps are taken. Here are the escape routes and their percentages of heat loss if you have taken no steps to prevent its happening.

1. ATTIC OR ROOF: 27%
2. WINDOWS: 25%
3. WALLS, JOINTS, CRACKS: 15%
4. FIREPLACE, FLUE: 13%
5. DOORS: 10%
6. ELECTRIC OUTLETS, SWITCHES: 10%

Cellulose insulation and the burn tests

Cellulose fibre insulation, that grey furry stuff made from old newspapers, has been the subject of some controversial headlines.

Nine Canadian manufacturers recently were in the news because their products allegedly failed smoldering combustion tests.

The only B.C. manufacturer among the nine protested the decision because it was based on such a narrow test result — in one of three burn tests, it was two percentage points over the allowable limit for weight loss. Its product passed the other two tests in the series.

Soon after, the CMHC reinstated federal approval of at least two makers — including the B.C. firm — because of confusion over the accuracy of the tests.

Differing lab procedures are enough to explain the discrepancies, according to the experts.

What's the homeowner to think? These reports are a little frightening. One Vancouver building supply store doesn't stock any kind of cellulose fibre insulation any more because of the bad publicity associated with it.

But according to a CMHC official in Vancouver, you have little to worry about if cellulose fibre is lying a foot deep in the attic or if you are thinking of having it blown into your house's hollow walls to keep the heat in.

"I have it in my house," says Joe Smith, regional inspector for the CMHC based in Vancouver, whose job involves careful investigation of fires where insulation or structiural defects or wiring is suspect.

He says that in the 15 years cellulose fibre has been in use, "there's not a single report of a fire where the cellulose fibre made any great contribution."

When the product first came out, Smith did some testing on his own. He attempted to burn a sample of the raw product just as it comes from the macerator (before the addition of fire retardants and fungicides and other chemicals) with a propane torch.

It wouldn't burn. The fibrous hairs would glow directly in the flame, but the particles themselves would not burn.

On the other hand, according to Smith, cellulose fibre sometimes damps down a fire that starts from other causes.

Smith says he has photographs and a report on a fire that was caused by a recessed ceiling light fixture which was covered over by cellulose fibre insulation — contrary to building codes.

The fixture heated up and set the joists on fire and the paint on the ceiling burned for several feet around the light — but the cellulose fibre insulation refused to burn, and probably prevented the fire from spreading.

Another house in Prince George lost its roof in a blaze but was saved from worse damage by a layer of cellulose fibre in the attic, Smith says. The fire started in the basement, raced up an open plumbing stack into the top storey and burned the roof off. But the insulation kept the flames from the lower part of the house.

As for fire hazards, many older homes probably have insulation in their attics which are more dangerous than cellulose fibre — shredded cedar bark, for example, or the older fibreglass batts backed with kraft paper and a coal tar product, adds Smith.

Cellulose fibre insulation has other qualities which make it useful.

"Although it's not as inflammable as fibreglass, which is almost inert, it does have the quality of getting into little cracks and crevices where you couldn't get fibreglass unless you tore it up into little bits and stuffed it in in by hand," says Smith.

Cellulose fibre stops the thermal breaks at the ceiling joists, he says.

How to lay floor tiles yourself the easy way

Before you start, make sure that your floor is clean, dry and properly prepared. Get all your materials and equipment together before you begin.

Most floor tiles are 12x12 — one square foot. Multiply the width of the room by the length and add 10 per cent extra to allow for fitting and possible later repair.

Concrete floors should be smooth and dry, with holes and cracks filled with latex underlayment. If the floors were painted with rubber latex paint, you can lay the tiles over it, but with oil base paint, it must be completely removed before instaling new tile.

Wood floors should be firm and smooth and have at least 18''-deep, cross-ventilated air space beneath them. Badly worn boards should be replaced and loose boards renailed. Particle, chipboard and flake board are not recommended as underlayments for floor tile.

How To Measure

Measure the room correctly. First, remove any quarter round molding or cove base around the room. Because adjacent walls are rarely at right angles, best results will be obtained by installing the tile starting from the centre of the floor. Find the centre by measuring the length of each side wall and driving a nail into the floor at centre. Connect centre points on two opposite side walls by tightly stretching a chalked string between these two points and snapping it against the floor. The lines must be at right angles to assure an even pattern.

Temperature Is Important

Keeping the tile and the room at 70 degrees for 48 hours beforehand will assure easy instalation. Remove the backing paper just before putting each tile in place. Do not remove backing paper from more than one tile at a time.

Start laying the tile in the centre of the room, making sure that the first tile is square with the chalk lines. Butt each tile squarely up to the adjoining tile, making sure the corners meet exactly. Do not try to slide a tile into position and do not press down until the tile is placed correctly. Lay tile along the line until no more full tiles will fit. Go back and lay additional rows of full tiles until one quarter of room is finished. Repeat with each quarter of room until all full tiles are instaled.

Be the talk of the town: send for plans to make these decorations for your garden

By STEVE ELLINGSON

Imagine the fun of creating a gigantic 'Christmas card' right in your own front yard . . . these home-made decorations will be your gift to your friends, the neighborhood and the world!

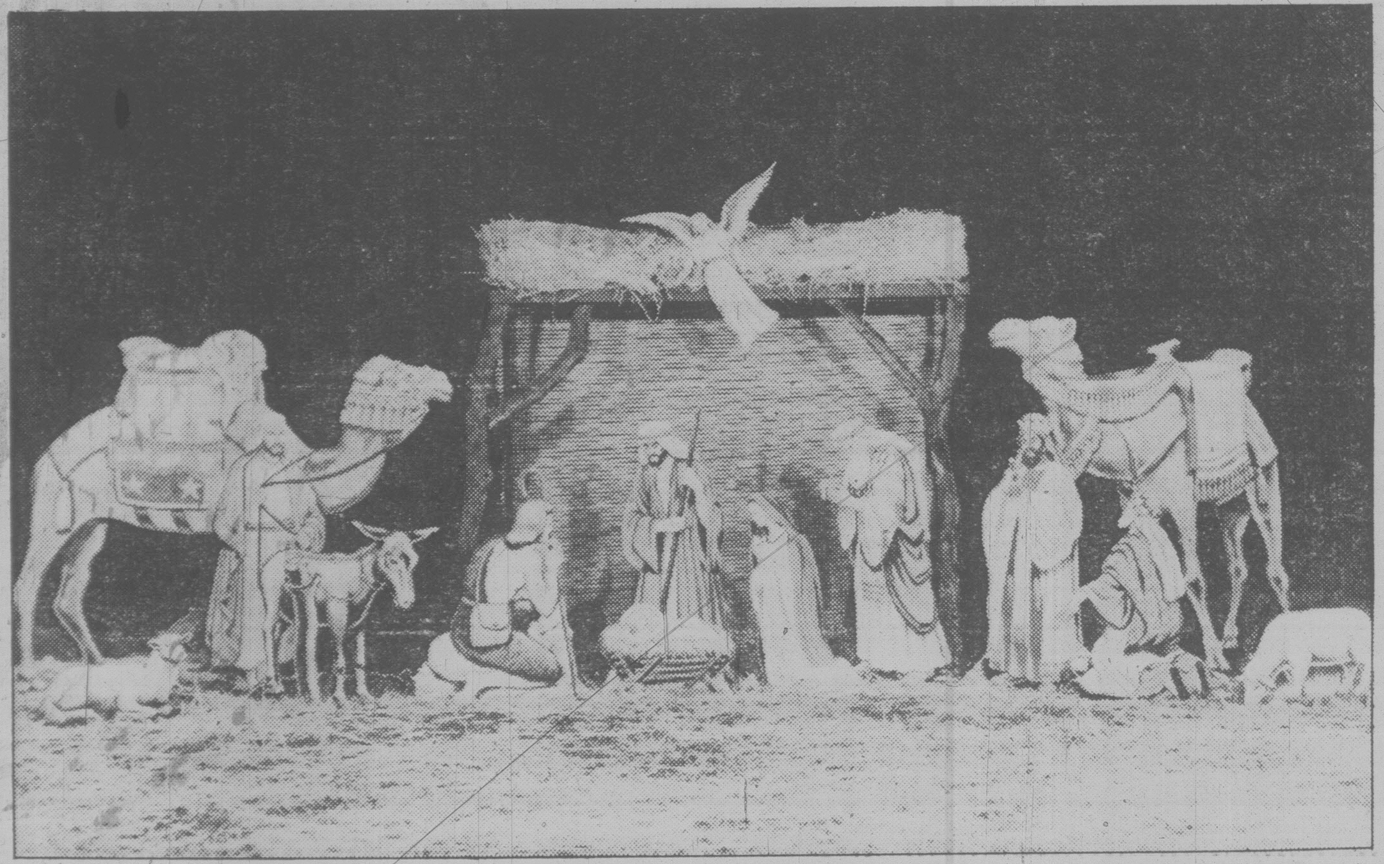
Take your pick of the two full-color weatherproof displays pictured here. A "Visit from Saint Nick" is the theme of the first one . . . it comes complete with jolly life-size Santa, Mrs. Santa, Sleigh, and eight reindeer.

All you have to do is glue the full-color posters onto plywood, cut them out and presto, an instant display that keeps on giving year after year.

Or you can create a different mood by displaying this traditional creche scene. It comes complete with Mary, Joseph, Christ child, Wise Men, shepherds and other scene figures pictured.

All pieces are two-thirds life size and printed in vibrant color on heavy waterproof billboard paper. Again, all you do is glue the figures onto plywood, cut out, and set up. To obtain the SANTA SCENE, Pattern No. C-20, send $20.00. To obtain the NATIVITY, Pattern No. C-7, send $20.00. (Both prices include postage and handling) by cheque or money order to:

U-Build Pattern Dept.,
Box 160, Cote St. Luc,
Montreal, Que. H4V 2Y3



Children's beds like cars, boats

At Gautier-Tabago, the French childrens' furniture showroom, youngsters' fantasy beds appeared as a racing car, a racing boat, a jeep, even a moon buggy.

Although made of durable plastic and combined with storage compartments that made these regulation-size twin beds perfectly practical, the price tags were about $700 each. Yet, according to Alain Cochet, executive vice president, just this year Gautier's salesmen sold 4,000 of the beds in various Arab countries.

"Just think," he couldn't help adding, "one sultan has 200 children!"

Lighting is measured in Lumens. For example, a 60 Watt bulb produces 768 Lumens.

25 Watt bulb . . . 255
100 Watt bulb . . .1,660
150 Watt . . . 2,775

Strangely enough, four 25 Watt bulbs, then, do not give you the same number of Lumens as one 100 Watt bulb.

A small kitchen, up to 80 square feet, needs two forty Watt flourescent bulbs, or one 100 Watt incandescent one. Kitchens up to 120 sq. feet require one 100 Watt flourescent, or a 200 Watt incandescent bulb.

Any really good lighting outlet will have knowledgeable people on staff who will not just sell you lighting fixtures, but who will ask for room dimensions, ceiling height, what activities are planned, and whether there is auxiliary lighting of any sort. From this information, they will be able to tell you exactly what sort of fixture, and how many you will need to do the job.

Spanish wreck yields its gold

Bert Webber. President, Seaquest International, Inc. So what's the business? Hunting sunken treasure.

"Treasure hunting has never been a business, but we're trying to prove it can be," says 36-year-old Bert Webber, who, last winter, unearthed what has to be called the treasure find of the century. Estimated to be worth a mind-boggling 100 million dollars, the booty was aboard the sunken 17th-century Spanish galleon Concepcion. The treasure and how Webber got to find it, was the subjects of Lost Treasure of the Concepcion, to be broadcast Saturday, Nov. 10 on channel 7 at 8 p.m.

In 1641, the Concepcion, laden with gold and silver, sank in the Caribbean. Over the years, many men probed the waters for the wreck. One man, American colonist William Phips, succeeded in finding it in 1687. Phips pulled up 37 tons of silver. But experts estimated that was only a quarter of the ship's loot.

Last November, in a coral reef known as Silver Shoals, located about 80 miles northeast of the Dominican Republic, Webber found the rest of the treasure. But the spectacular find wouldn't have been possible without Seaquest International, the corporation Webber formed to finance research in Europe, handle legal negotiations in foreign lands and select and utilize the latest technology.

What it all added up to was taking the risk out of finding treasure in ships that sank en route from America to Europe between the 14th and 17th centuries. "We have more projects we're planning around the world," Webber says.

Webber is not saying what the Concepcion treasure will eventually yield, but he concedes it will be in the millions. And Seaquest won't get all of it. The Dominican Republic, claimant to the reef banks, gets half of the sales and the right to keep one-of-a-kind items.

The real war in space

Surprised

If you're an advertiser we hope not, at least not unpleasantly when you find yourself involved in the game of "numbers."

Numbers in the advertising business refer to your audience, whether it be listeners, viewers, readers, subscribers or just plain purchasers of a product containing advertising messages. Of these only the last two can be documented. All other numbers in the advertising game are the results of surveys, estimates, or the publishers stated press run.

In most daily newspapers (the Times and Colonist among them) our numbers are the papers we sell and those figures are audited by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. They don't accept the papers we use ourselves in the plant, papers supplied to advertisers as checking copies, papers distributed for promotional purposes or papers printed and unsold. They just count those our customers buy!

You won't be surprised when you select The Victoria Times and the Daily Colonist as your advertising medium. Our representatives can quote our net paid circulation at any time.
